

Top 5 Commercial Construction Trends for 2022

 Article originally appeared in [www.constructconnect.com ]

By Kendall Jones,

All in all, 2021 was an okay year for the commercial construction industry. Overall construction spending was up, with residential construction put-in-place seeing an increase but nonresidential experiencing its second year of decline.

Construction companies also had to deal with continuing labor shortages and issues with getting building materials delivered on time due to supply issues and rising material prices. They've also had to contend with the ongoing coronavirus pandemic, first with the Delta variant earlier in the year and then later with the Omicron variant, which appears to be more transmissible even among previously vaccinated individuals.

So, what should we look forward to in 2022 in commercial construction? Here are five trends we are keeping an eye on as the year unfolds.

Construction Put-in-Place Growth

Construction spending through November 2021 totaled $1.46 trillion, setting the year up to be another record-high for construction put-in-place. Once the final numbers are in, ConstructConnect is forecasting total put-in-place for 2021 to be around $1.57 trillion, which would be an increase of 6.8% over 2020.

Construction put-in-place is the estimated total dollar value of construction work done in the United States and is compiled monthly by the U.S. Census Bureau.

For 2022, ConstructConnect is expecting a 6.6% increase in put-in-place to $1.67 trillion. Non-residential construction should get back on track after two consecutive years of decreased construction spending caused by the pandemic and increase 5.6% to $837 billion in 2022.

Residential construction spending isn't expected to have the explosive increase it had in 2021 but should be strong at 7.7% above last year. Residential put-in-place is expected to increase to $836.8 billion in 2022, roughly matching non-residential construction spending.

Some of the top areas for growth in construction put-in-place in 2022 will come from infrastructure spending. After years of stopgap measures and short-term spending bills, Congress finally passed a long-term infrastructure bill with the $1.2 trillion Infrastructure Investment and Jobs Act.

Over the next five years, $550 billion of new federal investments will be spent on constructing new infrastructure and making much-needed repairs to existing infrastructure. The bill calls

Governor Newsom Joins Vice President Harris to Highlight State-Federal Investments and Action to Build Wildfire Resilience

 Article originally appeared in [www.gov.ca.gov ]

Governor Gavin Newsom joined Vice President Kamala Harris and U.S. Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack on a visit to the San Bernardino National Forest to highlight new federal funding for wildfire recovery and mitigation efforts and discuss state-federal collaboration to tackle the wildfire crisis, complementing California's bold investments and ongoing work to build wildfire resilience statewide. The California Blueprint proposes an additional $1.2 billion as part of a total

$2.7 billion multi-year package to step up forest management and other projects to decrease catastrophic wildfire risk amid the extreme climate impacts across the West.

"California is on the frontlines of the climate crisis, experiencing record-breaking heat waves, wildfire seasons, and droughts. We're fortunate to have the Biden-Harris Administration's partnership in meeting this existential challenge head-on," said Governor Newsom. "Our state is leading the nation with transformative investments and innovative strategies to protect Californians and the environment.

We look forward to our continued collaboration with the federal government to scale up this vital work, and I thank Vice President Harris for her leadership in this space."

Vice President Harris announced $1.3 billion in federal funding for post-wildfire and hurricane recovery in states across the country, including $600 million to support California communities hit hard by recent wildfires with cleanup efforts, reforestation, watershed restoration and infrastructure repairs. In addition, the Vice President announced more than $48 million in funding for Joint Chief's Landscape Restoration Partnership projects – including four in California – that mitigate catastrophic wildfire risk and help create climate-resilient landscapes, protect water quality and enhance wildlife habitat.

Today's announcements build on the Biden-Harris Administration's recently-released 10-year strategy that aligns with the Governor's Wildfire and Forest Resilience Action Plan. The strategy calls for the U.S. Forest Service (USFS) to significantly expand fuels and forest health treatments, prioritizing high-risk areas including the Sierra Nevada Range in California. Joint state-federal management is crucial to California's overall forest health and wildfire resilience, as the federal government owns 57 percent of California's forestlands while the state owns 3 percent.

Following an aerial tour of fire scars from the 2020 El Dorado Fire and Apple Fire, the Governor, Vice President and Secretary Vilsack joined officials including Senator Alex Padilla (D-CA) and Rep. Pete Aguilar (D-CA) at the USFS Del Rosa Fire Station for a briefing by state and federal fire officials. USFS Chief Randy Moore, USFS Regional Forester Jennifer Eberlien, California Natural Resources Agency Secretary Wade Crowfoot and CAL FIRE Acting Director Michael Richwine provided an overview of this year's fire outlook, current drought impacts and the extreme weather conditions that are driving catastrophic wildfires in the Western U.S.

U.S. Small Business Administration and Business Forward Announce Launch of the “Small Business Digital Alliance”

 Article originally appeared in [www.sba.gov ]

The U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) and Business Forward, Inc., a non-profit organization working with small business leaders in support of policies promoting America’s economic competitiveness, announced the launch of the Small Business Digital Alliance (SBDA). A joint public-private co-sponsorship, the SBDA will connect small businesses with critical tech resources to start and expand their e-commerce business to scale for success. The new initiative will also feature a series of free briefings and training to help small businesses access and utilize these digital tools to reach new markets, find diverse talent, improve operations, and raise capital.

Beyond access to technical skills development and tools, the SBDA will play a significant role in helping entrepreneurs expand their networks -- a key component for small businesses as they seek new customers and stronger relationships with vendors, lenders, and other stakeholders needed for success. Specifically, through the SBDA, the SBA and Business Forward will convene some of America’s most respected leaders in business, government, economic development, and other aligned spaces to facilitate cooperation and help small business owners fully harness the power of technology to fuel growth.

“The world’s economy has grown increasingly digital, particularly over the course of the pandemic, and small businesses have pivoted and adapted by adopting technology at incredibly high rates. Through our new Small Business Digital Alliance and agreement with Business Forward, the SBA will help more small businesses accelerate their online and social media strategies to power their businesses in e-commerce and better engage with their customers where they are,” said Administrator Guzman. “And as access to highspeed internet increases, thanks to President Biden’s Bipartisan Infrastructure Law’s $65 billion in broadband infrastructure investments, the SBA will be working to ensure that entrepreneurs in every community in America are ready to take advantage of new opportunities to innovate and leverage technology to start, operate, grow, and be resilient.”

Small businesses depend on a comprehensive suite of tools to expand their customer base, manage their growth, find and retain talent, and enter new markets, including globally, but often encounter obstacles. Aligned with the Biden-Harris Administration’s focus on equity and leveling the playing field, the collaboration with Business Forward through the SBDA will prioritize creating access to competitive opportunities and lowering barriers to entry for small businesses, especially those from historically underserved and disadvantaged communities across the country.

“In today’s economy, small businesses are moving online to attract customers, open new markets, develop new products, and obtain capital – and there is a range of new digital tools and services that can help, particularly when small businesses partner with their community,” said Jim Doyle, President of Business Forward. “By leveraging their community’s local tech incubator, VC firm, university lab, training program, and free digital tools from global businesses – small businesses are more likely to succeed. Collaboration is critical, and the SBDA will help small businesses and their communities work together to achieve and maintain critical mass for success.”

The SBA and Business Forward, along with Members of the SBDA, will also host a series of joint virtual and in-person events across the nation to include policy briefings on small business trends and showcase the digital tools small businesses can take advantage of -- free of charge. A list of Members of the Small Business Digital Alliance will be released in the coming weeks. We encourage any and all companies interested in supporting small businesses with trainings, insights, and free digital tools to contact us to become part of SBDA at info@smallbusinessdigitalalliance.com.

for investing $110 billion for roads, bridges, and infrastructure projects, $40 billion for bridge repairs and replacement, $39 billion for public transit, $66 billion for passenger and freight rail, $65 billion for broadband internet, $65 billion to rebuild the electric grid, and $55 billion to upgrade water infrastructure.

In addition to making much-needed repairs and improvements to our nation’s crumbling infrastructure, the bill is expected to be a big job creator for the construction industry over the next couple of years. The big question is, where will those workers come from?

Construction Employment & Labor Woes

In 2020, at the onset of the pandemic, the construction industry shed over 1.1 million jobs in just two months: March and April. By the end of the year, the construction industry had added back all but 248,000 of those jobs, per the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

In 2021, the construction industry added only 160,000 jobs after a mostly up and down year for jobs gains. Those meager gains left the construction industry down 88,000 jobs from the pre-pandemic levels. Construction unemployment was cut nearly in half over the course of 2021, starting at 9.4% in January and falling all the way down to just 5.0% in December.

Job openings were also up and down in 2021, from a low of 242,000 to a high of 453,000 in October. Preliminary data from November 2021 has job openings in construction at 307,000.

Data from the BLS shows that average hourly wages in construction were up 4.61% for all employees in 2021 with nonsupervisory employees doing slightly better as they saw their average hourly earnings increase 5.26% last year. In addition to increasing wages, construction firms still have a long way to go in attracting and retaining the next generation of workers as they try to add more skilled workers to their payrolls.

The construction industry has been struggling with a skilled labor shortage dating back to the Great Recession. The issue then, as it is now, is more workers are retiring out of the industry compared to younger workers coming in. Construction firms are going to have to increase their efforts to find, train, and retain skilled workers to keep up with demand.

Construction work has a stigma that all of its jobs are dirty, dangerous, labor-intensive, and low-paying. While some of that is true to a certain degree, the construction industry offers a wide variety of high-paying jobs and plenty of opportunities for career advancement into lucrative positions.

The pandemic isn’t helping out much either with community college enrollment, which provides vocational training for many skilled construction jobs, is down 9.5%. Part of President Biden’s initial infrastructure plan included investing $100 billion in workforce development to create apprenticeship programs and provide job training, but unfortunately, that was left out of the final bill.

Goldman Sachs One Million Black Women Latest Round of Investments, Partnerships, and Grants

 Article originally appeared in [www.goldmansachs.com ]

On January 12, One Million Black Women announced new investments, impactful new partnerships, and philanthropic grants for 17 leading organizations and projects across the country to lift up Black women and girls.

The announcement was made following the January 12 One Million Black Women Advisory Council meeting, which consists of 17 Black business and community leaders.

At the meeting, One Million Black Women highlighted a new partnership with the renowned King Center to prepare young people to be the global leaders of tomorrow ahead of Martin Luther King Jr. Day.

The series of 17 new investments, partnerships and grants reflect One Million Black Women's ongoing commitment to invest in the core pillars of healthcare, job creation and workforce development, education, affordable housing, digital connectivity, financial health and access to capital that impact Black women at every stage in their lives. Many of the organizations were identified through the more than 50 One Million Black Women listening sessions held with nearly 20,000 Black women from around the country, and the One Million Black Women Advisory Council.

"Through the listening sessions, we've heard from Black women all over the country. These women are building non-profit organizations and companies with their personal savings and loans from family members because they care so deeply about their communities," said Dr. Ruth Simmons, President of Prairie View A&M University. "I am so pleased that with this next round of investments, partnerships, and grants, we are able to support these phenomenal women and we can see how transformative their initiatives and projects can be."

New investment capital will be provided to expand the impact of the following seven organizations and entrepreneurs across the country:

- Chime Solutions (Atlanta, GA) to provide capital to Shelly Wilson, co-founder of Chime Solutions to accelerate its mission of creating jobs and economic opportunity for people in underserved communities.

- Grameen America Elevate Initiative (National) to make microloans and provide financial training, asset and credit building tools to underserved Black-women entrepreneurs across the country.
- Funding U (National) to make loans to high-performing low and moderate-income students attending four-year, not-for-profit colleges across the United States.
- Wonderschool (National) to reduce "childcare deserts" by scaling access to high-quality, flexible care for children and families.
- On the Road (Dallas, TX) to expand existing operations and increase the number of women in high-paying, skilled auto repair jobs through an extensive apprenticeship program.
- Sendero Verde (New York, NY) to finance the construction of a public-private, mixed-use, mixed-income development in East Harlem which will consist of a Harlem Children's Zone K-5 Promise Academy, and affordable and workforce housing units.

- South Meadows (Rome, GA) to provide capital to Dionne Nelson, CEO of Laurel Street to finance the construction of a 100% affordable residential development with 80 multi-family units, an onsite educational facility and community farm.

Four new partnerships will support the work of the following organizations:

- The King Center (Atlanta, GA) to support the launch of the reimagined Beloved Community Leadership Academy over the next two years, creating a One Million Black Women cohort for Black girls from across the country.
- Eat. Learn. Play (Oakland, CA) to combat food insecurity and low literacy rates, the partnership will employ Black woman-owned restaurants to provide meals in high-needs areas and help distribute 500,000 books through new Eat. ## Portland Airport Makes Progress on $1.5-Billion, 5-Year Expansion Project With Major Focus on Sustainability

 Article originally appeared in [www.levelset.com ]

By Isaac Barzso

The Portland International Airport is in the midst of a major expansion to its main terminal that the Port of Portland projects will result in $1.5 billion in construction spending through 2025.

“We’re taking the airport that has served the region well for the past 80 years and updating and upgrading it,” said Chief Projects Officer Vince Granato. “While the space will look and feel different, we are keeping the heart and soul of the airport that Portlanders know and love — easy to navigate; bright, open spaces; and local shops and restaurants — it will still feel like home.”

The expansion has already drawn headlines for its design. Architectural firm ZGF reportedly was inspired by the landscapes of the region around Portland in the project's design. Architects, including ZGF managing partner Sharron van der Meulen, said they are significantly inspired by the natural spaces of the Pacific Northwest.

“The inspiration we really looked to in the beginning was of the place, the natural environment, the really unique regions that we live in,” said van der Meulen, lead interior designer for the project.

According to reports, the airport's main terminal is getting a new roof made entirely of lumber salvaged from wildfires in Oregon and neighboring Washington. Meant to recall the natural spaces that the Pacific Northwest is known for, the space is also being constructed by joint venture Stanska Hoffman in order to withstand any natural phenomena or disasters that may occur in the area, which can be prone to earthquakes.

Pickleball community rallies to make the game WA's state sport

[ Article originally appeared in <https://crosscut.com> ]

By Margo Vansynghel

In April 2020, a few weeks after Washington's “Stay Home, Stay Healthy” mandate went into effect, Todd Wine and his friends headed to a vacant school parking lot in Ballard to do something a little out of bounds: play pickleball.

Wine had just received a net for his birthday and was aching to try the quintessentially Northwest sport sometimes described as “giant pingpong.” The issue? Sport clubs and courts around the city were locked down. So, paddles (and beer Koozies) in hand, Wine and his friends plotted out the lines of a pickleball court on the asphalt with white gaffer tape and started hitting the customary perforated plastic ball. The surface wasn't perfectly smooth, but the ball bounced just fine — and Seattle Guerrilla Pickleball was born.

This was half a century after the game itself emerged, invented in a backyard on Bainbridge Island in the summer of 1965. Three dads came up with the game — basically, a spin on tennis and pingpong using a whiffle ball on a badminton-sized court — to keep their kids entertained. The sporty innovation (named after the Pickle Boat in rowing, for which oarsmen were chosen from the leftovers of other boats, although some claim a family dog named “Pickles” had something to do with it) took off and became a beloved Northwest summer pastime.

Now, the sport is booming, with demand for courts surging and big money flowing into pro pickleball, TV deals and gear. And, if Senate Bill 5615 succeeds this year in the Washington Legislature, pickleball could even become Washington's official state sport.

These days, Wine and other Guerrilla Pickleball friends play on a “real” court in Georgetown, a city-operated tennis court transformed into four pickleball courts by setting up two portable pickleball nets (about 36 inches high and 22 feet wide) on either side of the tennis net. The group has grown into a few dozen people who play every week, if the weather allows.

“I think it's going to be a very large sport in short order,” says Seattle Guerrilla Pickleball regular Fred Annett, as he gears up for a game on a cold and clear Sunday. Like many Seattleites, Annett got hooked on the sport during the pandemic. “COVID was hard on things, especially team sports — but pickleball actually grew,” he says.

The game — which is akin to tennis in spirit, though the ball, paddles and court size are different and the scoring is simpler — has a few key features that have made it especially appealing during the pandemic.

Donald Jacko Sr., DAD Services

[ Article was originally posted on
<https://cameonetwork.org> ]

DAD Services of Oakland, California is a janitorial company that specializes in providing top-notch commercial cleaning for San Francisco Bay Area businesses. The company was established in 1998 by Donald Jacko Sr., a native Oakland resident, and has always been a minority-owned, family-run business. DAD Services serves a diverse group of clients including medical institutions, investigative services, and security companies at their various locations. As part of his business philosophy, DAD Services aims to employ disadvantaged people, particularly formerly incarcerated individuals.

Pacific Community Ventures first met Donald in 2016 when they made a small loan to DAD Services. That funding helped make the company bankable, and shortly after, Donald secured a line of credit from Bank of the West. DAD Services has also taken full advantage of PCV's free Business Advising program, which pairs small business owners with pro-bono business advisors. Since joining the Business Advising program in 2016, Donald has been paired with a total of three advisors receiving mentorship in budgeting, financial forecasting, and HR.

DAD Services is also a participant in PCV's Good Jobs, Good Business pilot program, an initiative to provide business owners with the resources they need to offer quality jobs. DAD Services has been working on implementing the toolkit with pro-bono advisor Jennifer Levy, a retired Partner at Rockwood Capital, LLC. Jennifer has nearly three decades of professional and managerial experience, including growing teams, which has made her an invaluable resource for the DAD Services team as they set out to think through which area of the toolkit they wanted to tackle.

They chose the Employee Engagement section of the toolkit. When beginning the pilot, Donald sought out the opinions of his existing employees to understand how the company could improve. The common denominator was the need for middle management. Subsequently, he held interviews with the employees that he felt were qualified to take the next step as a manager. He promoted four employees and integrated them into their managerial role by building out training materials to prepare them.

Through their work together on the GJGB pilot, Jennifer and Donald Jr. have also looked into other procedures at DAD Services. For example, Jennifer gave recommendations on how their employee handbook could be simplified and made more relevant. The toolkit has helped DAD Services lay the groundwork for added engagement across all levels of their organization promoting an increase in cohesion and accountability. Jennifer inferred, "I think [DAD Services] would've eventually come to the conclusion that [they] couldn't have grown without the leverage – and getting [the GJGB Toolkit] was the leverage."

Donald stated, "Things run more like a well-oiled machine." Rather than being a reactive business, they can be strategic at the senior management level now that they have hired middle management. They can also respond to opportunities that arise: for example, short-term contracts where they will be paid by lump sum and require them to tap their subcontractor network. DAD Services also hopes these initiatives will help them limit attrition and absenteeism as their employees will be better trained and therefore set up for success in their jobs. Finally, DAD Services shared that providing training has helped lower these administrative costs. As DAD Services continues to work on the pilot, they hope to see greater profitability, employee stability, and company awareness of where they are going.

Koji Kanematsu, Onigilly

[ Article was originally posted on
<https://cameonetwork.org> ]

Onigilly is a fast-casual restaurant chain specializing in Japanese rice balls, called "onigiri." Koji Kanematsu founded Onigilly in 2007, after noticing a lack of healthy, affordable food options in the United States. "In Japan, onigiri is everywhere," says Koji. "I used to eat it every day because it is convenient, healthy, and affordable. Our mission is to spread healthy fast food nationwide and to improve people's diet lifestyle," he says

In 2007, he put his commitment and passion in motion by applying for a food incubation program at La Cocina of San Francisco, which was established to support emigrant women and encourage their independence. La Cocina understood Koji's vision, and despite being outside of their typical demographic, supported Onigilly, which became their first business run by a male owner in the entire program.

But when he wanted to purchase his own food cart, he could not find financing. Opportunity Fund saw Koji's potential and provided a $10,000 loan to help him launch Onigilly. The food cart became a hit, and in 2012, Koji decided to open a brick-and-mortar restaurant with the help of a second loan from Opportunity Fund. The next year, he opened a second location and employed 20 people in both stores. Then, he won the SF Small Business of the Year Award. Onigilly has seen remarkable growth ever since.

The company currently has four locations in San Francisco's Financial District and recently opened a fifth location in Palo Alto. Now Onigilly is the newest addition to the ICA Fund Good Jobs investment portfolio. The investment, a $300,000 convertible note, is the first underwritten by ICA Fund Good Jobs with capital sourced from JPMorgan Chase's Entrepreneurs of Color Fund.

"It's been inspiring to watch Onigilly's journey unfold over the years," says Sean Daniel Murphy, CEO of ICA Fund Good Jobs. "We first met Koji, his wife Aki, and the Onigilly team through our partnership with La Cocina. We have supported Onigilly through our Growth Strategies course led by Michael C. Bush, as well as well as through the Good Jobs Accelerator program led by Dianna Tremblay. Now, through the work of Investment Associate Rasheed Mitchell and key consultant Jonathan Mi, as well as the support of Investment Committee Chair, Jim Harris, we are proud to support Onigilly as investors."

ICA Fund Good Jobs' investment will allow the company to invest in machine operations and menu development before a Series A investment round and additional geographic expansion next year. According to Koji, the eventual goal is to open 500 Onigilly restaurants in the United States.

That kind of business growth means job growth as well. What started as a food cart is now a rapidly growing company with 35 employees. Koji has worked with ICA Fund Good Jobs for years to scale his business and create a good jobs plan for his employees. He also wants to create opportunities for employees to share in the wealth created by the growing business. "To grow, we need to spread a new food and food culture to our customers," Koji says. "That is very challenging, so our team members are very important. A system for treating them well will be Onigilly's strength."

The commitment to taking care of Onigilly's employees is part of what makes this an attractive investment for ICA Fund Good Jobs. "This is a powerful opportunity to support business growth, the creation of accessible jobs, and the potential to build wealth for Onigilly employees in San Francisco and across the country," Murphy says.
