

Increase funding to benefit California's science and innovation ecosystem

[Article originally appeared in www.calmatters.org]

By Robert Conn, CalMatters,

The COVID-19 pandemic has shined a spotlight on the important role science plays in addressing any public health crisis. It has also reinforced that basic research and scientific discovery require purposeful, proactive funding – and the government is part of that equation.

But such funding is not just about addressing a global health crisis. Science and innovation also drive development of the jobs of tomorrow, critical to ensuring we can compete on a global scale. President Joe Biden drove these points home during his recent State of the Union address, and support for science has been a bipartisan priority.

Congress now has an opportunity to make that happen by adopting bipartisan innovation legislation and increasing science funding in fiscal year 2023 spending legislation. Doing so would benefit not just our nation, but also California's knowledge economy.

The largest share of research performed at California's universities is funded by the federal government. California is also top ranked among national leaders in many metrics of science and innovation, including business research and development, academically lab space, inventions and patenting, science and engineering graduate students – and even federal and state R&D expenditures.

California's contributions to the digital economy are well known, as are our world-leading science powerhouses such as Caltech, Stanford and the 10 University of California campuses, and major labs such as NASA's Jet Propulsion Lab, the Salk Institute for Biological Sciences, and the Scripps Research Institute.

Our manufacturing and agriculture sectors also contribute nearly $400 billion to the state economy every year, per U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis data, with major sectors including computers and electronics, aerospace and pharmaceuticals. These sectors directly benefit from federal investments in materials research, crop science, chemistry and other areas.

Last summer, federal policymakers made progress on annual spending bills, where the bulk of federal science investments are funded, but that effort stalled amid other priorities and political battles. The recently passed appropriations package is not at the level of investment needed to meet either Biden's vision or that of the bipartisan legislators who crafted the bills.

Administrator Guzman Announces 70% Increase in Industries Eligible for Women-Owned Small Business Federal Contracting Program

[Article originally appeared in www.sba.gov]

The U.S. Small Business Administration today published an updated list of eligible industries for federal contracting set-asides for the Women-Owned Small Business Federal Contracting Program (WOSB Program) based on a recent study analyzing industry gaps for women-owned businesses. The study, commissioned by the SBA, showed that women-owned businesses are underrepresented or substantially underrepresented in the federal marketplace across hundreds more North American Industry Classification System (NAICS) industries.

The updated list will support agencies in allocating set-asides for WOSB and economically disadvantaged women-owned small businesses (EDWOSBs) across more industries, potentially resulting in hundreds of millions of dollars in additional set-aside opportunities for women entrepreneurs.

"President Biden came into office with a commitment to put equity at the heart of everything we do, and advance reforms that open the doors of opportunity and prosperity for every entrepreneur," SBA Administrator Isabella Casillas Guzman said. "The pandemic disproportionately impacted women entrepreneurs who were challenged by early access issues to financial relief and disruptions in childcare, among other issues. Thanks to the American Rescue Plan and actions of the Biden-Harris Administration, we have invested billions of dollars in relief to women entrepreneurs. And we are committed to doing more. This new rule expanding the WOSB Program will help more women seize potentially hundreds of millions of dollars more in federal procurement opportunities across 92% of all federal small-business contract spending. Small business ownership is an important pathway to independence and generational wealth building, and this change will help to further clear that path for more women entrepreneurs and reverse decades of inequity, discrimination and underinvestment that have held back America's women entrepreneurs for far too long."

Per the Small Business Act SBA conducts a study every five years to identify industries in which small businesses owned and controlled by women are underrepresented or substantially underrepresented in the federal marketplace. Based on the results of the commissioned study, the SBA will increase the number of WOSB Program eligible industries from 444 to 759, which represents a 70% increase. These changes are effective immediately and apply to new solicitations. The expansion of the program will provide a broader range of industries for contracting officers to offer restricted-competition contracting opportunities to SBA-certified WOSBs and EDWOSBs. Some of these additional industries include Temporary Help Services, Home Health Care Services, Electronic Computer Manufacturing and Air Transportation Support.

After consulting SBA's WOSB Program industry list, federal procuring agencies elect whether to limit competition to certified WOSBs or certified EDWOSBs. SBA's new industry list covers NAICS codes that account for 92% of all small-business prime-contract spending, representing increased opportunities as previously the list covered just 75% of that spending.

The list of eligible NAICS industries can be found at <https://www.sba.gov/document/support-qualifying-naics-women-owned-small-business-federal-contracting-program>

ACCESS TO CAPITAL - READY TO GROW YOUR BUSINESS?

BIPOC, Women Entrepreneurs Can Receive Accelerated Access to Capital Across the Pacific Northwest and California

[Article originally appeared in www.prnewswire.com]

Umpqua Bank, a subsidiary of Umpqua Holdings Corporation (NASDAQ: UMPQ), has officially activated its $1 million Umpqua Bank Managed Loan Fund with Kiva, a nonprofit unlocking capital for historically underserved entrepreneurs and their communities. Through Kiva's innovative crowdfunding microloan platform, Umpqua is providing eligible BIPOC and women entrepreneurs across its footprint accelerated financial support towards a 0% interest loan up to $15,000 to finance their emerging business.

Leveraging Kiva's crowdfunding platform, qualifying business owners in Oregon, Washington, California, and Idaho will receive a triple match from Umpqua for every dollar raised for their business from family, friends, and supporters in their communities.

Umpqua is encouraging entrepreneurs in communities it serves to learn more about Kiva and apply for funding.

Umpqua is encouraging entrepreneurs in communities it serves to learn more about Kiva and apply for funding.

"Our partnership with Kiva makes it possible for more entrepreneurs to turn support from their communities into a source of capital that would otherwise not be available," said Umpqua's Chief Marketing Communications Officer Eve Callahan. "If individuals believe in and are willing to help finance a local BIPOC or women entrepreneur, Umpqua will triple-match the amount of their financial support so enterprises can more easily and quickly access the financing they need."

How Kiva Works

For any business owner in need of funding to start, sustain or grow, the only collateral needed to access capital through Kiva is the support of the people and community they serve. Typical barriers to access are removed from consideration, including those related to credit history, physical assets for collateral, citizenship or verifiable financial track record.

Kiva works hand-in-hand with entrepreneurs to set a financing goal up to $15,000 and raise contributions from friends, family, and community members on its platform. Kiva also offers access to a global network of lenders interested in supporting businesses. Financial commitments raised are then combined into a 0% interest business loan eventually repaid to supporters over three to five years.

Umpqua, through the Umpqua Bank Managed Loan Fund, will help BIPOC and women entrepreneurs reach financing goals more quickly by effectively quadrupling every dollar they raise towards their financing goal.

How to Apply

To apply for Kiva financing and the triple dollar match through the Umpqua Bank Managed Loan Fund, entrepreneurs in Oregon, Washington, California, and Idaho can visit the Umpqua-Kiva partnership page. The initial application process typically takes between 20 and 30 minutes.

The Kiva partnership is part of Umpqua's Small Business Empowerment Program, which brings together the bank's various initiatives to improve access to funding, products/services and expertise under one strategic umbrella. Along with Kiva, the Small Business Empowerment Program includes partnerships with organizations that are often the first step for entrepreneurs interested in accessing Kiva funds, including: Oregon-based MESO (Micro Enterprise Services of Oregon); Washington-based Business Impact NW; and California-based Centro Community Partners.

"We are excited to partner with Umpqua Bank as part of its Small Business Empowerment Program to provide additional loans and unlock capital for under-resourced entrepreneurs," said Sarah Marchal Murray, Chief Strategic Partnerships Officer at Kiva. "Ensuring every business owner has equal access to capital and other resources to succeed is important for creating strong and vibrant communities. Partnering with Umpqua, Kiva is honored to extend our platform's reach to more communities across the West Coast."

Winning Innovation Strategies for Plumbing Contractors

Article originally appeared in [Autodesk Construction Cloud Blog. <https://construction.autodesk.com>]

By Eric Thomas,

Plumbing dates back to ancient civilizations; these societies relied on channels and pipes to irrigate crops, remove waste, and provide potable water to inhabitants. Plumbing technology has since evolved immeasurably. However, one fact remains: plumbing is vital to the way we live and work today. This is especially true for commercial and residential construction sites, where plumbing contractors play an essential role between general and specialty contractors alike.

Regardless of the scope and size of the project, plumbing projects are always one of the top considerations for builders.

The plumbing contracting industry continues to grow at a promising rate. The Bureau of Labor Statistics has projected employment to grow 5% between 2020 and 2030. This growth and recent changes in the construction landscape present both challenges and opportunities for plumbing contractors. To achieve the greatest possible business outcomes, contractors must harness leading-edge strategies and purpose-built technology to deliver high-quality, consistent work.

Plumbing Contracting in 2022 and Beyond

As specialty contractors, plumbing contractors bring a specialized skill set, industry-specific processes, and unique workflows to every project. These processes and workflows are often some of the first ones introduced to a project. They serve as the base for other specialty contracting activities.

Within these projects, plumbing contractors must navigate requirements and processes from both general and specialty contractors. Doing so requires significant investment in monitoring timelines, building in efficiencies, and managing budgets to ensure the best results and greatest profitability.

The industry landscape looks different than in years past. The current market size is estimated to be $107 billion. The industry is ranked fifth in the construction industry in terms of market size.

However, the construction industry is still recovering from the effects of the pandemic. The current 2022 growth rate for construction has been predicted to be around 3.9%. Contractors can expect to see the greatest impact on business development, contract management, planning and scheduling, and materials and workforce management in the supply chain. Plumbing contrac-

3 Ways Preliminary Notices Build Better Relationships With the General Contractor

[Article was originally posted on
www.constructconnect.com]

By Justin Gitelman,

If you work in construction, you're probably used to the long wait to get paid after completing a job. You wait patiently for payment from the general contractor (GC). You try calling, sending emails and invoice reminders. Nothing seems to get their attention, in fact, they seem annoyed that you keep asking. Then you ask yourself: Is there anything I could have done to establish a relationship earlier on in the project? In fact, there is: Sending a preliminary notice is one of the best ways you can improve communication and build a stronger relationship from the start.

One of the most common misconceptions about preliminary notices is that they worsen the relationship between the parties at the top of the payment chain and the subcontractors towards the bottom. However, that couldn't be further from the truth.

Vigilant subcontractors send preliminary notices whether or not there's a payment issue—and GCs, property owners, and lenders prefer it that way. Just look at the numbers from Levelset, who collects feedback from every recipient that they send notices to:

- 30% of recipients respond positively to preliminary notices.

- 56% provide a neutral response, considering preliminary notices a part of everyday business.

- Less than 2% say receiving a preliminary notice makes them feel like a sub distrusts them.

Sending preliminary notice isn't just about protecting your lien rights. There are numerous benefits to the practice.

How Do Preliminary Notices Build a Stronger Relationship?

Building a strong relationship with the GC is important for every subcontractor. A good relationship not only helps you get paid faster on the current project, but it can improve your prospects for future business. Here are 3 ways preliminary notices can help you build a better relationship with your general contractor.

1. Preliminary Notices Create a Professional First Impression

First and foremost, general contractors like to know they're working with professionals who know what they're doing.

tors who work primarily on construction projects will see an increased emphasis on efficiency and maximizing resources to offset these challenges.

Common Obstacles to Growth for Plumbing Contractors

The past few years have forced the construction industry to adapt to changing guidelines, economic developments, and local requirements in the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic. Plumbing contractors are no exception to these challenges, many of which must be addressed before additional contracting activities can begin.

Preconstruction challenges are some of the most significant faced by plumbers and pipefitters. The bidding process is one of the most time-consuming and critical to ensure cash flow and steady work. Tracking multiple bids and invitations to bid requires a great deal of coordination, collaboration and management. Silos and disparate systems make it difficult to monitor these bids effectively.

During the construction phase, plumbing contractors must manage productivity, quality, planning, labor shortages, employee satisfaction, and financials. These challenges may appear to come down to the employee side (engagement, collaboration, and training) and the client side (satisfaction, payment, and results). However, they are essentially two sides of the same coin. Each factor must be strategically managed to succeed in employee and client retention. Employees who are given the opportunity and tools to succeed will show higher engagement and productivity. Clients will benefit from investment in employees through quality of output, making them more likely to return for future projects.

What Successful Plumbing Contractors Do Differently

What separates successful plumbing contractors from the rest? Top-quality work, a solid network, and excellent resources often come to mind. These assets do make a significant difference, but there's one more element that can give these specialty contractors a leg up: a winning technology strategy. Sure, we've been enjoying the benefits and comforts of plumbing for thousands of years, well before the dawn of modern technology. However, a strong technology toolkit can help today's plumbing contractors automate workflows, create a single source of truth for important documents, mitigate risk, and win more bids.

Specialty contractors today must manage more moving parts within their businesses than ever before. These individual activities and larger operations can cause many challenges, but they can also present incredible opportunities for growth. The right technology toolkit will allow members to collaborate seamlessly from anywhere, at any time. It will also help to standardize documents, establish step-by-step workflows, and build in efficiencies in operations throughout each department.

Specialty contractors often worry that learning a new technology will take their team away from critical work. The ideal technology toolkit will integrate seamlessly into these activities, while reducing time-consuming, manual tasks and providing a convenient reference for critical processes. For example, instead of having to call the office to locate a drawing for a project, contractors can reference the most recent, up-to-date version on their mobile devices. Doing so will save time and resources while alleviating the frustration that comes with tracking down information.

Increase funding to benefit California's

In addition, the U.S. House and Senate are gearing up to merge competing innovation bills passed by each chamber in a rare bipartisan feat, and the next spending cycle is just kicking off. Altogether, this bipartisan legislative moment presents an opportunity to increase funding that will drive the science and innovation ecosystem throughout our state, and the nation overall. Perhaps this effort can help heal some of our divisions too.

This is where the California delegation comes in. Our state's congressional delegation includes appropriators and federal legislators like Democratic Sen. Diane Feinstein and Reps. Ken Calvert, a Republican from Corona; Pete Aguilar, a Democrat from San Bernardino; Mike Garcia, a Republican from Santa Clarita; and Norma Torres, a Democrat from Pomona. Each is in a position to advocate for these funding increases.

They can make the case that these bipartisan efforts are worth the investment – not just for our nation, but also for our current and emerging scientists and innovators throughout the state who could use the boost to discover the next breakthrough in science that could save lives. We need the scientific workforce of the future.

Congress could also increase funding for the Space Grant and Sea Grant college programs. Working with hundreds of scientists at dozens of California universities and community colleges, these federal programs provide local opportunities for space and oceanic research, industrial partnerships and educational opportunities for California students.

If we let this moment slip away, a once-in-a-generation opportunity will be lost, leaving important investments on the table. Congress should pass the bipartisan innovation legislation and ensure that we increase spending in the next fiscal cycle. You never know when the next pandemic or major crisis might hit. We need to be prepared.

City of Oakland seeks proposals from organizations to provide career development, job training services

[Article originally appeared in
www.oaklandca.gov]

Through April 22, 2022, the Oakland Workforce Development Board (OWDB) is seeking proposals from qualified organizations to provide adult and/or youth and young adult career services to help individuals gain skills, credentials, and employment while helping businesses connect with a qualified workforce.

Through this RFP process, approximately $6 million in funds will be awarded. The number of awards will be determined by the quality of the proposals received and to ensure services are provided throughout Oakland. OWDB anticipates funding contracts for a one-year period from July 1, 2022, through June 30, 2023, with the possibility of contract renewal for up to two additional years. The Request for Proposals and related materials are available now at: oaklandca.gov/wdb.

OWDB seeks to resource a network of qualified providers to deliver services that are accessible to Oakland and WIOA priority populations, and are accessible from specific geographical areas (East Oakland, Central Oakland/Fruitvale, and West Oakland) to advance the economic security and resilience of Oakland's most vulnerable residents.

This RFP requests services in multiple several funding and program areas, including the Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act (WIOA), "Oakland Forward" California State Youth Workforce Development Program, and related direct services in the following categories:

- One-Stop Operator to coordinate mandated partners, service delivery providers, and reporting responsibilities in compliance with WIOA;
- On-Call Adult America's Job Centers of California (AJCC) Career Services to help adult job seekers access employment, education, training, and support to succeed in the labor market;

- Youth Services offering year-round workforce development services for youth that provide work-based learning opportunities like on-the-job training, internships, and apprenticeships as training paths to employment.
- "Oakland Forward" California Youth Workforce Development Program offering year-round and/or summer employment programs geared toward training and connecting young people to public service jobs with a focus on "clean and green" work activities that promote climate resilience and improve neighborhood conditions.

While participation in the bidder's conference is not mandatory, interested applicants are encouraged to attend the meeting which will take place virtually via Zoom. Applicants must register in advance by emailing owdb@oaklandca.gov to receive the Zoom webinar information.

All who wish to participate in this RFP must register through iSupplier at (oaklandca.gov/services/register-with-isupplier) to receive addenda and updates on this RFP, submit proposals, invoice payments if selected, and direct notification of future bid opportunities.

Request for Proposals, disclosures and attachments are also available to download at: oaklandca.gov/wdb.

Over the past three years, the OWDB has funded career development and training services to more than 2,900 individuals, with roughly two-thirds of them entering jobs at an average starting wage of more than $15 per hour. The availability of additional City funds will help Oakland residents access even better future opportunities as the local and regional economy continues to grow.
