

The Benefits of Growing Your Network in the Construction Industry for General Contractors

In the world of commercial construction and especially working as a general contractor, networking and building relationships are vital and necessary skills that spur leads and drive revenue.

By Sydney Paschall

Whether in person at a trade show, online on a project database, or on the jobsite, maintaining positive relationships remains at the heart of running a successful general contracting business.

Relationships are the master key that brings prosperity to your construction company—whether it’s collaborating with the architect or designer, creating bids for builders and potential clients, or sourcing specialty trade and subcontractors to assist in finishing projects in a timely and accurate manner. Establishing a secure connection via building rapport and trust are the key components of creating business relationships that will not wither over time but remain firm even as issues arise.

Let’s break down the top benefits of networking and building strong relationships in the construction industry.

Expand Your Subcontractor Network

It is safe to say that every general contractor is constantly searching for reliable subcontractors with whom they can build good working relationships to use on projects with zero hesitation. Constructing a solid arsenal of dependable subcontractors you can rely on to complete jobs efficiently, timely, and professionally brings peace of mind that comes without a price tag.

Colorado River deal: What does it mean for California?

[Article originally appeared in www.calmatters.org]

By Alastair Bland, CalMatters

After nearly a year of intense negotiations, California, Nevada and Arizona reached a historic agreement today to use less water from the overdrafted Colorado River over the next three years.

The states agreed to give up 3 million acre-feet of river water through 2026 — about 13% of the amount they receive. In exchange, farmers and other water users are expected to receive compensation from the federal government. An official with the Department of the Interior said the payments could total $1.2 billion and would come from the 2022 Inflation Reduction Act.

The Biden administration has been pushing the states since last spring to reach an agreement to cut back on Colorado River water deliveries. The three-state deal is a historic step — but it is not final: The U.S. Interior Department must review the proposal. And everything will have to be renegotiated before the end of 2026.

In California, the agreement would mostly affect the water supplies of farmers in the Imperial Valley. Coming up with a plan to fairly cut water use has created tensions between farms and cities and between states, especially California and Arizona.

Here’s what you need to know about the new plan, how it will affect California and whether it will bring relief to the West’s vital water supply system:

Why was this agreement needed?

The Colorado River basin has been overdrafted for decades. Its major reservoirs, Lake Mead and Lake Powell, have been steadily declining, threatening 40 million people in the West with a water supply crisis.

In response, last June, a top Interior official asked the seven basin states to reduce water use by 2 to 4 million acre-feet per year, or a 15% to 30% annual reduction. The states failed to meet their deadlines to come up with a plan. So the Interior Department presented its own proposed actions last month, including a controversial one that would cut into the senior water rights of Imperial Valley farmers.

Unhappy with those federal proposals, California, Arizona and Nevada doubled down on their negotiations and tried to come up with an alternative. Today’s agreement by the three states to cut water use through 2026 is considered a major, albeit temporary, step. At least half of the 3 million acre feet will be conserved by the end of 2024.

The Interior Department has now retracted its plan so it can add the states’ new agreement to the package of options it is considering.

Bureau of Reclamation Commissioner Camille Calimlim Touton called the agreement “an important step forward towards our shared goal of forging a sustainable path for the basin that millions of people call home.”

Who in California does this affect? Will they have to use less water?

The agreement would affect the water supplies of about 19 million Southern Californians in six counties who receive imported water from the Metropolitan Water District.

VETERANS CORNER

Ready, set, compete! How we're helping veterans and military family members innovate and start new businesses

[Article originally appeared in
www.uspto.gov]

By Kathi Vidal, Under Secretary of Commerce for Intellectual Property and Director of the USPTO

America's inventors and entrepreneurs power our nation's economy, competitiveness, and security. Many of America's outstanding innovators and leaders are veterans. The skills they gained from their service, including teamwork, integrity and being organized, disciplined, adaptable, and focused, prepare them well for entrepreneurship. In fact, veterans have a proven track record of engaging in business ownership at higher rates than their peers in the civilian sector.

For service members preparing to transition into the civilian world, starting a business can be a viable second career. And for military spouses, self-employment can help provide professional and economic stability to weather the constant change that the military lifestyle brings. In alignment with First Lady Jill Biden and the White House's Joining Forces Initiative that centers on the three core pillars of employment and entrepreneurship, military child education, and health and well-being, we are working to encourage and support more transitioning service members, military family members, and veterans to bring their innovations to life, build successful businesses, and protect their creations with intellectual property.

Take Charlynda Scales. A U.S. Air Force veteran and entrepreneur, she is the founder and CEO of Mutt's Sauce LLC®, "the sauce for every meal." Her late grandfather and fellow Air Force veteran Charlie "Mutt" Ferrell originally created the specialty sauce and left her the recipe, which she then turned into a successful business. At our Veterans Innovation and Entrepreneurship Program last year, she spoke about how the skills she gained in the military helped her launch her business. She offered the following advice for other veteran entrepreneurs: "When you have served in the military and you decide you want to go into entrepreneurship, you are strengthening the country by being a business owner. Holding on to your core values, being a good person, and service before self - those things that we learned in the military - that's what sets you apart from everyone else."

Growing up in a career military family, my father served in the U.S. Navy as a senior chief and I spent my childhood on military bases in the United States, Panama, Germany, and the Azorean Islands (Portugal). I'm grateful for the opportunity to connect with service members and their families, and share information about the resources we provide at the USPTO - from trainings on patent and trademark basics to free legal services - that can help them become successful entrepreneurs. Our goal is simple: to shine a light on what starting a business looks like, what it requires, and who you can turn to for help on your journey.

Recently, I met with military spouses and family members at Fort Bragg, North Carolina and MacDill Air Force Base, Florida to discuss essential skills every entrepreneur needs to know. And on June 9, we'll be holding an event at Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam. During these events, we go over the many aspects of entrepreneurship, from honing your business plan and protecting your brand and ideas, to market analysis and financing. Our military outreach events also feature successful military spouses and veteran business owners who share their personal experiences in entrepreneurship. Contact us if you're interested in hosting one of these workshops in the future.

Our USPTO regional offices also reach out across the country meeting innovators where they are with resources to jumpstart their businesses. From in-person and virtual events to networking opportunities, we are joining forces with local organizations and bringing entrepreneurship training directly to the military community.

Dragon's Lair 8 competition finals at the University of South Florida on March 29 (Photo by Michael Cleveland/USPTO)

I also had the pleasure of serving as a judge in the latest Dragon's Lair competition co-hosted by the U.S. Special Operations Command and 18th Airborne Corps at the University of South Florida's Research and Innovation Park in Tampa, Florida. Now in its eighth installment, service members from across the U.S. Department of Defense (DOD) submitted their ideas for innovations to meet future challenges. The eight finalists were selected from among 80 ideas that represented every service within the DOD, and all ideas included developing intellectual property. The innovators really used their boots on the ground knowledge to see their projects through and create concrete solutions for real problems the Army currently faces. The winning innovation was a mold conditions awareness tool, a 3D-printed device that uses sensors to detect temperature and humidity levels within barracks rooms to identify early signs of mold, presented by U.S. Army 1st Lt. Chris Aliperti and Pvt. Salem Ezz from the 3rd Infantry Division. Congratulations to all the finalists in the competition on their phenomenal ideas.

And while construction has been slower than other industries to adapt to the rise in the digitalization of processes, it is becoming more challenging to find referrals for contractors simply by word-of-mouth or a random stroke of luck. Using services like ConstructConnect Bid Management which already has active subcontractors looking for ITBs in your area, can greatly increase your opportunity to find responsible professionals for your jobs.

Establish Lifelong Clients

Like a client-contractor relationship in any industry, establishing your network of return clients that choose you and your company as their default is what every business owner wants to see. That is why not only is expanding your network in the construction industry so important, but why turning your current clients into long-lasting customers is equally as vital.

Establishing a strong rapport, creating trust, and completing jobs with integrity are crucial to building customer satisfaction, bringing repeat business, and increasing client loyalty to your company. The formula for success is quite simple—you finish a project on time within budget that meets or exceeds the customer's standards and then you get paid on time and hopefully make a decent profit. For a client-contractor partnership to withstand trials and tribulations, communication, collaboration, and having a clear and concise contract are nonnegotiable.

Generate More Revenue

This one speaks for itself. If you build, and nurture relationships within your construction network, ultimately, you will be driving more success to your business. When your clients are happy, you are happy. When the subcontractors you trust and hire complete projects correctly and on time, you are happy.

PROGRAM SUMMARY

Do you remember the days when construction materials and skilled labor were plentiful? Welcome to 2023 when everything costs more and takes longer to get. The industry is adapting to these constraints through prefabrication. The goal: Efficiency in design + efficiency in manufacturing + efficiency in construction = Cost, Quality, Safety, Schedule. Gilroy USD will share lessons learned and what happens during procurement, design, manufacturing, and construction benefit from prefabrication. Learn from the perspective of the Owner, the architect, and the contractor – what went well and what problems were encountered. Did the Owner get what they wanted? How much flexibility did the architect have during design? Did it cost more to get less?

Under the guidelines of CA Public Contract Code 10510.4 – 10510.9, UC Irvine Health is seeking the best firm to provide facility master planning services in support of the UC Irvine Health in Orange, CA.

The University of California, Irvine Medical Center is the only academic medical center serving Orange County. It was established in 1976 and is located on 52 acres of land in Orange, 12 miles from the UCI campus. As one of five University of California medical centers throughout the state, UCI Medical Center is recognized not only for specialized, high quality patient care, but also for the expertise of its physicians and researchers. UC Irvine Medical Center's 459-bed facility is Orange County's only designated comprehensive emergency service and level I trauma center.

In 2003, a Long Range Development Plan (LRDP) was established which set the framework for UCI Medical Center growth over a 20 year planning horizon. The update of the LRDP will be informed by work and analysis completed in this master planning study.

In April 2011, the Medical Center completed its first integrated strategic plan, Advancing the Future of Healthcare – A Strategic Plan for UC Irvine Medical Center and the School of Medicine. The plan will provide a roadmap over the next five years (FY 2011 to FY 2015), setting the course for a new level of excellence at UC Irvine Health.

Mayor Breed and Speaker Emerita Nancy Pelosi Kick Off Planning of the APEC Economic Leaders' Meeting at the Asian Art Museum

[Article originally appeared in <https://sf.gov>]

San Francisco Mayor London Breed, Speaker Emerita Nancy Pelosi and business leaders gathered during the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation Spring Launch at the Asian Art Museum to demonstrate their support for San Francisco as the City that will host the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) 2023 Economic Leaders' Meeting, the leading forum for facilitating trade and investment, economic growth, and regional cooperation in the Asia-Pacific region.

In November 2022, Mayor Breed celebrated news that the City was named the host City for the APEC Economic Leaders' Meeting this year. November 12th thru 18th of this year, San Francisco is excited to welcome President Joe Biden and Vice President Kamala Harris, along with world leaders from APEC member economies, approximately 500 global CEOs, 1000 media representatives, and nearly 30,000 delegates from across 21 member economies to participate in the 30th APEC Economic Leaders' Meeting.

The APEC Spring Launch, hosted by the San Francisco Special Events Committee, is the official launch event to build anticipation and excitement about San Francisco as the host city for the APEC 2023 Economic Leaders' Meeting, and to help secure funding and partnerships through engaging local business leaders. Their support will help strengthen the financial, business, and reputational impacts as a result of all the activities that will occur around the planning phase, and as all the events leading to the Meeting.

"We are honored and privileged that the White House has placed its trust in San Francisco to host this important international event," said Mayor London Breed. "This opportunity comes at a critical time when we are putting all of our efforts into our City's recovery. We are excited to showcase our civic pride, cultural diversity and creativity to the rest of the world. The partnerships and support from our business and community leaders have been significant as we are working on San Francisco's recovery. As we look forward to hosting attendees from all around the world, I am confident that as they explore our many celebrated neighborhoods, they will discover all the great things San Francisco has to offer."

"San Francisco is a thriving economic powerhouse and indispensable gateway to the Indo-Pacific with a strong and vibrant AAPI community – making our City the perfect host for the 30th APEC Economic Leaders' Meeting," Speaker Emerita Nancy Pelosi said. "It is with pride and excitement that I join in preparing to welcome APEC Economic Leaders, titans of industry and community leaders from the region to our world-class City by the Bay this November. Under the leadership of the Biden-Harris Administration, this Meeting will be an important step to further strengthen the partnership for a free and open Indo-Pacific."
