Mayor London Breed Announces $1.5 Million To Establish City's First African American Small Business Revolving Loan Fund In Response To Covid-19

Mayor London N. Breed, the Office of Economic and Workforce Development (OEWD), Main Street Launch, and the San Francisco African American Chamber of Commerce today announced the establishment of the African American Small Business Revolving Loan Fund, supported by an initial investment of $1.5 million from Give2SF donations. The Fund will provide access to capital and financial assistance for African American entrepreneurs and Black-owned small businesses impacted by COVID-19.

The new loan program complements Citywide efforts to support micro-enterprises and small businesses historically underserved by private banks and other traditional sources of financing, as well as OEWD's standing commitments to invest in the City's historically Black neighborhoods.

"For generations, Black-owned businesses have been marginalized and discriminated against, all too often having difficulty securing the financing they need to open and operate," said Mayor Breed. "In the wake of COVID-19, businesses all over San Francisco are struggling to survive, and Black-owned businesses in particular have been especially hard hit. This new loan fund is a step in the right direction to right past wrongs and help San Francisco businesses stabilize and thrive."

The purpose of the African American Small Business Revolving Loan Fund is to help stabilize San Francisco's Black-owned small businesses by meeting urgent capital needs brought on by sudden revenue loss from business disruption resulting from COVID-19. As the City recovers from the current recession, it has made a commitment to ensuring a more equitable recovery and inclusive future economy.

"Our Black owned small businesses have suffered for years trying to survive through high rents, outmigration of community, gentrification and isolation," said Supervisor Shamann

5 Ways Construction Management Software Saves Time and Reduces Risk

[ Article was originally posted on Autodesk Construction Cloud Blog. <https://construction.autodesk.com/> ]

By Lauren Ginsberg,

Despite continued technological advancement in the construction industry, professionals still find sharing information across the project lifecycle cumbersome. Systems lack interoperability, information isn't readily accessible in the field, and manual curation opens the door to costly errors. This traditional workflow hinders team effectiveness and can interfere with the overall success of the project.

However, construction management software is a solution that addresses architecture, engineering, and construction (AEC) workflow problems by improving collaboration and the handoff of project data. These solutions are tailored to meet the needs of an increasingly complex industry, bridging the gaps to reduce risk, increase efficiency, and improve profitability.

By addressing common pain points, here are five ways that construction management software saves time and reduces the risk of project errors:

- Improves Decision Making: 2D and 3D plans are in one system, saving time and giving stakeholders the visualization they need for faster, more confident decision making.
- Streamlines Communications: Markup functionality is far more sophisticated and is maintained between versions of docs, making communication more fluid and transparent.
- Ensures Quality and Accuracy: Document version access and approval controls make sure the team is always working with the latest set of approved plans.
- Enhances Data Accessibility: Text and properties are fully searchable, not only saving time but reducing risk by making sure the right information is quickly and easily referenced.
- Simplifies Collaboration: File sharing and viewing sheets are made faster, simplifying collaboration.

So, what would the implementation of this software mean for the workflow of a project? Let's explore some of the major benefits of adopting best-in-class construction management software.

Improved Collaboration

Right now, most of the digital tools in broad use are siloed by specialty; designers are using one set of tools and field staff using another. A comprehensive construction management software system offers a graceful solution to bridge gaps in document handoff, saving time, costly mistakes, and eliminating barriers between teams.

Designers and those working in the field can now standardize information across teams, working off a single, up-to-date model. This gives project managers and site foremen better visibility into project status, enabling more accurate procurement and scheduling.

Having a single system that is built to enhance collaboration also saves firms the cost of deploying multiple technology solutions and learning resources. This provides owners and CIOs peace-of-mind while minimizing costly errors by reducing risk from users accessing the wrong model. With a reduction in managing multiple tools, decision-makers can now focus on maximizing the value of solutions and meeting compliance.

Increased Efficiency

Architects & Engineers (A&E) can share both 2D and 3D plans and revisions in the same system, significantly reducing the amount of time spent moving and converting documents. A digital solution is especially advantageous in this regard as A&Es can manage their own documents and push out revisions to stakeholders more easily. They'll also be able to find 2D and 3D plans in the same system and show the relationship between different sheets.

Mayor London Breed Announces $1.5 Million To Establish City's First African American Small Business Revolving Loan Fund In Response To Covid-19

Walton. "This fund will provide much needed resources for Black businesses to survive this pandemic and continue to pay their employees. I am most excited about the loan forgiveness options available to recipients of the fund. Without this support, we would be complicit in the possible complete eradication of Black businesses in San Francisco."

San Francisco recognizes the oppressive history of racial injustice, the structural inequities that remain today, and the trauma those inequities perpetuate. Specifically, Black-owned businesses were in a perilous environment pre-COVID-19 and that environment has resulted in disproportionate financial impacts due to the pandemic both locally and nationally, creating further uncertainty as the City moves into recovery. Black-owned businesses are over-represented in the hardest hit sectors of the economy and tend to be smaller, with only a third of the revenue of non-black businesses. Black-owned businesses also face more hurdles in accessing liquidity and support services, and are 60 percent less likely to receive all of the financing they need, which puts them at additional risk for closure.

"Equitable access to economic opportunity is critical for the ongoing cultural and economic vitality of San Francisco," said Joaquín Torres, Director of the Office of Economic and Workforce Development. "Black-owned businesses provide important services to our community, are a consistent source of employment for Black workers, and spur meaningful local investments. By providing an opportunity to positively and proactively change the socioeconomic impacts that race still plays in the lives of Black San Franciscans, this new fund is a part of the solution. We can and must do more as a City to build wealth and generate wholeness for San Francisco's Black community."

"As we transition to reopening, we need to look beyond the requirement to wear face coverings," said Sheryl Davis, Director of San Francisco's Human Rights Commission. "What we defined as 'normal' was not working for so many in our City before COVID-19. Going forward, we must normalize investing in our most vulnerable community members and disrupting systems of inequity that have been perpetrated for centuries. This fund represents that shift to supporting business owners that have been overlooked and disadvantaged, while others profited unfairly. It's great to see them now rewarded for their innovation, creativity and hard work."

San Francisco's African American Small Business Revolving Loan Fund will function as a rapid deployment fund to support Black-owned businesses in San Francisco, including those businesses that provide needed services in historic African American neighborhoods. The goal is to enable businesses to sustainably maintain or advance their business operations while building African American community wealth in San Francisco, meeting essential needs, expanding opportunity and reducing structural barriers to equity.

Funding will be disbursed to eligible businesses by Main Street Launch. The $1.5 million will support zero-interest loans up to $50,000, with flexible repayment terms, loan forgiveness options, and wide-ranging technical assistance. The goal is to ensure that loan eligibility criteria are driven by need and that the loan product is structured to minimize barriers to access, including no personal guarantees or collateral requirements. Loans will be prioritized for long-standing San Francisco Black-owned businesses, especially those whose business operations are most heavily impacted by ongoing Shelter in Place restrictions.

"We are proud to partner with OEWD to support the honorable Mayor London Breed in her efforts to strengthen and reimagine African American small businesses in San Francisco during these turbulent COVID-19 times," says Jacob Singer, President and CEO, Main Street Launch. "We are looking forward to working with our community partners to deepen our impact and support of African American businesses in San Francisco."

"The compelling urgency of an African American Small Business Revolving Loan Fund has long been overdue; now it is amplified due to COVID-19," says SFAACC President, Dr. Matthew Ajiake. "This equity opportunity fund gives Black businesses the essential financial assistance required to curtail the historic and systemic inequalities of opportunity, now exacerbated by inadequacy of federal stimulus programs that have funded less than 12% of Black businesses. This absence of adequate federal focus and financial assistance have handicapped a disproportionate number of black businesses, forcing many owners to eventually close their doors forever. It is against this backdrop that we truly welcome our new partnership and thank Mayor Breed for her support and leadership." Dr. Ajiake continued, "The SFAACC believes this fund would disrupt systemic racial inequities in funding mechanisms and strengthen Black businesses in this great City as their survivability and sustainability have cascading impacts on every aspect of our shared San Francisco experience and future."

The African American Small Business Revolving Loan Fund is a result of public and private partnerships that leverage various resources, including generous donations to the Give2SF COVID-19 Response and Recovery Fund. Donations to Give2SF support housing stabilization, food security, and financial security for workers and small businesses impacted by COVID-19.

"It's really hard for my business right now, still paying rent and not having any income," said Hudari "Coach" Murray, owner of NewBills Barbershop at 781 Divisadero Street. "I have applied for three grants but haven't received any help. So I'm relieved and gratified to hear news of this new funding opportunity. Thank you to Mayor Breed and the City for listening."

"COVID-19 has wreaked havoc on the African American community from both a health and economic standpoint. As a Black Business Owner in the Fillmore, it's been virtually impossible to get assistance," said Cheree Scarbrough, co-owner of Phenix Hair Designs formerly Winfred's. "This new Fund will help businesses like mine implement necessary changes in order to keep our doors open and our clients safe."

Mayor Breed has been a world leader during these unprecedented times, and I'm grateful for her leadership and knowing that we haven't been forgotten." Interested small businesses can visit oewd.org/covid19/business to learn more about how to apply for the new loan program, as well as existing loan and grant programs.

Additional Support for Small Businesses

Mayor Breed's initiatives to support small businesses during the COVID-19 pandemic include:

Deferring business registration fees businesses totaling $49 million for 89,000 businesses and further delaying the City's collection of the unified license fee until September 30, 2020. This will lead to $14 million in deferrals impacting 11,000 payees. In March, Mayor Breed announced an initial three-month delay for the collection of the fee.

Business tax deferrals for small businesses with up to $10 million in gross receipts. Mayor Breed and Treasurer Cisneros notified small businesses that their first quarter businesses taxes can be deferred until February 2021. No interest payments, fees, or fines will accrue as a result of the deferral.

$10 million Workers and Families First Paid Sick Leave Program, proving up to 40 hours of paid sick leave per employee.

$9 million Emergency Loan Fund providing up to $50,000 in zero-interest loans for individual small businesses.

$2.5 million Resiliency Grants providing up to $10,000 grants to over 300 small businesses.

$1 million for Neighborhood Mini-Grants to Support 300 Small Businesses in Underserved Communities.

$2.5 million in support for working artists and arts and cultural organizations financially impacted by COVID-19.

Supporting nonprofits funded by the City so workers don't lose their incomes;

Issuing a Moratorium on Commercial Evictions for small and medium sized businesses that can't afford to pay rent.

Capping the commission at 15% on 3rd party food delivery companies;

Advocating for additional resources for small business and workers through the federal CARES Act.

Establishing City Philanthropic www.Give2SF.org Fund, where donations will support housing stabilization, food security, and financial security for workers and small businesses impacted by coronavirus.

Launching a one stop City website for businesses and workers seeking resources, contacts, and updates during the COVID-19 emergency: www.oewd.org/covid19.

Access to Capital

Ready to Grow Your Business?

Lendio Partners With Lendistry to Ease Access to Capital for Underserved Communities

 Article was originally posted on [www.globenewswire.com ]

Lendio, the nation's leading marketplace for small business loans, today announced a partnership with Lendistry, an online lender that focuses on providing economic opportunities and progressive growth for minority small business owners and those in underserved communities.

Lendistry began lending in 2015 with a mission to make the dream of owning a small business accessible to everyone. Many promising entrepreneurs are challenged to access the funding they need to start, operate and grow a business. According to the U.S. Department of Commerce Minority Business Development Agency, minority-owned businesses experience large disparities in access to capital. More than 70% of Lendistry's small business customers are women, minorities, veterans and those who serve in underserved communities.

With thousands of small businesses enduring temporary closures and ongoing economic uncertainty, Lendistry and Lendio's shared mission to fuel entrepreneurship will provide much-needed access to government relief funds as well as working capital as businesses seek to reopen and rebuild.

As part of the Coronavirus Aid, Relief and Economic Security (CARES) Act, the federal government created the Paycheck Protection Program (PPP) and set aside $650 billion to help small businesses. To date, Lendio has facilitated over $8 billion in PPP loans for more than 100,000 small businesses across the U.S. Many of these are among the smallest of small businesses; the average PPP loan size facilitated through Lendio is $65,000, where the national average is around $114,000.

"We're extremely proud to add Lendistry to Lendio's marketplace of small business lending options," said Brock Blake, CEO and co-founder of Lendio. "Lendistry's mission-driven approach to financing small businesses aligns with our own commitment to fueling the American dream. Now more than ever, business owners in underserved communities need funding to keep them going and help them plan for the future. Lendistry's experience and expertise coupled with Lendio's high-tech, consultative approach will do just that."

"Small businesses across the country are still feeling the impacts of the coronavirus pandemic. Many of the hardest-hit businesses are minority-owned or operating in underserved communities," said Everett K. Sands, CEO of Lendistry. "Partnering with Lendio will allow us to connect more of these business owners to a diverse range of capital solutions, whether in the form of SBA relief funds for their short-term needs or ongoing financing to facilitate long-term growth and success."

Let's Bridge the Digital Divide

[ Article was originally posted on <https://greenlining.org> ]

By Gissela Moya, Newsday

As COVID-19 has pushed many Americans online to work and attend school, we hear a lot about Zoom fatigue and other annoyances. But what about the tens of millions of Americans who either have only limited internet access at home, or no access at all?

Lack of internet access in some households and communities has long been a national problem. The pandemic has turned it into a national crisis.

It's time to close our nation's digital divide.

Millions of American can access the internet only through smartphones. That's better than nothing, but plagued by serious limitations: Data caps and slower speeds greatly limit what users can do. And some important tasks — like filling out complex applications for employment or college admission — are much harder, given the limits of a tiny touch screen.

The nonprofit group where I work has been talking to folks here in California and elsewhere about life on the wrong side of the digital divide, which makes everything harder, especially education. We spoke to a high school student taking business classes who struggles to create and upload web design assignments on her smartphone, and an older woman who had to drop out of a professional management course because she had no way to do the course work online.

Fabiola Espitia, a counselor at Chaffey College in Rancho Cucamonga, Calif., told us about a recent high school graduate she counseled who couldn't take an Advanced Placement exam due to lack of internet access. Others had their education disrupted when the pandemic forced the closing of a campus library, their only internet connection.

Unsurprisingly, the digital divide mirrors economic and racial ones. Last year, a Pew Research survey found distinct patterns in who lacks internet access at home. While 92% of families with a household income of $75,000 or more have a home broadband connection, that figure drops to 56% for incomes of $30,000 and below. While 79% of white households have a home internet connection, just 66% of black households and 61% of Latino households do.

Lack of internet access is a problem in urban and suburban homes, as well as in rural communities. And it is especially destructive when it comes to education. Overall, approximately 12 million students nationwide are affected by this digital divide, putting their futures at risk.

"Schools have shuttered and more than 50 million students have been told to head online for class," wrote Jessica Rosenworce, a member of the Federal Communications Commission, while dissenting from the rosy conclusions reached by the FCC's Republican majority in its annual Broadband Deployment Report. "This pandemic has demonstrated conclusively that broadband is no longer nice-to-have. It's need-to-have."

COVID-19 has shown us that the digital divide isn't sustainable if we want all Americans to have a fair shot at success.

The FCC needs to do more to bridge the digital divide, especially in urban and suburban homes. Congress must act swiftly and decisively by providing federal funding to build a future-proof, all-fiber network that reaches every household in the nation, and eliminating state-level bans on communities building their own networks.

Ensuring that everyone in the United States has access to robust, affordable, high-speed internet access should be a national priority.

Success Stories

Electronic Solutions, Cloverdale

 Article was originally posted on [www.napasonomasbdc.org ]

Background

Electronic Solutions targets electronic products and services the Cloverdale area in northern Sonoma County California. The community of 8,450 is located in the rolling hills along the world famous Russian River wine region.

Jim and Susan purchased this Radio Shack store in September of 2004. At that point the store was practically empty (all that remained was $20,000 in inventory in the 1,000 sq. ft. store).

Radio Shack is one of the nation's most experienced and trusted consumer electronics specialty retailers. The company has a presence through more than 6,000 company-operated stores and dealer outlets in the United States. Operating from convenient and comfortable neighborhood and mall locations, RadioShack stores deliver personalized product and service solutions within a few short minutes of where most Americans either live or work.

Challenges

The challenge was to give this retailer a larger presence and to increase traffic and sales.

The Radio Shack store was cramped and uninviting. In the 1000 sq. ft. store, 800 sq. ft. was showroom for the products. Because of the size, the products areas that did have merchandise did not have much assortment or much depth. Large items like flat panel TVs just took up too much room.

The store could not capture customers with hobbies because there was not enough merchandise in any particular hobby to satisfy the need for breadth of selection or in the consumables used in their hobbies.

There was no space to sit down and have a private conversation with a customer who might want to plan out a purchase. There was very little communication to the Cloverdale community either in advertising or in partnering. Radio Shack had relied on its brand recognition and location to drive traffic.

Actions taken

An expansion plan was mapped out for the additional space and new merchandise was considered. A $100,000 bank loan (Exchange Bank) was applied for and funded which covered the additional merchandise, shelving, advertising and transition costs.

A lease was signed to double total space and boost showroom space from 800 to 1700 sq. ft. (a 113% increase in space). New shelving was installed and an island checkout and service center was installed which opened up the new space and made it more inviting. More hobby, lifestyle and business merchandise purchased and displayed. New merchandise includes: Model airplanes, cars and boats (both gas and electric), Flat Screen TVs, Cellphones, Office Supplies, Business Equipment, iPods and MP3 players, and photographic cameras and equipment.

Clash detection is now practically seamless with unified 3D modeling, allowing most issues to be resolved before the first bolt is purchased. With cloud-based collaboration, scope or design changes are available in real-time, RFIs can be answered, and issues addressed from the field without wasting time walking back and forth to the trailer.

Issue reporting and punch down activities that are tracked digitally help ensure accuracy. Pictures tell a thousand words, and when subcontractors can reference the plan directly with an RFI and digital photo taken on the spot, uncertainty and guesswork are eliminated.

Reduced Risk

Errors and rework can cause a headache on any project. In fact, according to an FMI report, poor project data and miscommunication on projects is responsible for 48% of all rework in construction in the U.S.

The traditional method of printing pages and carrying folders out to the jobsite created numerous opportunities for errors. Using software to put the plans and information in the hands of the people who need it most is the best way of making sure that contractors are working with confidence. This single factor, combined with early clash detection, significantly cuts the probability of rework. Not only does this boost efficiency and quality, but it also reduces waste and helps keep the project on schedule.

More Fluid Communication

Construction management software creates opportunities not only for greater collaboration but also for clearer, more fluid communication. Built-in access control gives project managers the power to define role-based and version-based access for necessary team members. This means electrical subcontractors won't have to wade through pages and pages of plumbing plans and notes; they'll have what they need and only what they need. If there's a question or an issue, they simply reference it on the plan, and the note is instantly sent to the right person.

RFIs have never been easier. With the integration of smart devices, that means that issues can also include photos, and 3D location data, creating absolute certainty when it comes to finding solutions. The same is true for progress tracking and punch lists, giving project managers and owners a real-time view into the status of a project.

Unlock Your Competitive Advantage with Construction Management Software

The days of clipboards and coffee-stained pages are nearly gone. Smart devices and cloud sharing are paving the way for easier collaboration, higher efficiency, and better quality for project delivery across the industry. Frustrations that have plagued the building process for decades are becoming more manageable through digitization. Construction management software is giving us the power to not only keep building but to build better and smarter, maximizing our ability to compete in this fast-moving industry.
