Advocacy Brings Small Business Issues Back to Washington, D.C.

Dr. Winslow Sargeant, Chief Counsel for Advocacy

By Dr. Winslow Sargeant,
Chief Counsel for Advocacy

The Office of Advocacy continues exercising its unique role within government to give voice to small business issues and concerns.

The past few months have seen Advocacy engage with widely diverse small business groups. From meeting with the Plumbing, Heating, and Cooling Contractors Association in Washington, D.C., to universities and high tech startups in Michigan and Ohio, America's entrepreneurs and innovators continue to seek ways to work with government in growing our economy.

Advocacy is fortunate to have a talented crew of professionals who are in tune with the small business community. Small businesses are also encouraged that the Obama Administration has issued a number of executive orders (E.O. 13563, 13579, 13609, and 13610) that direct agencies to consider business size at all stages of the regulatory process. These actions are important for entrepreneurs and small business owners because they free them to focus on what they do best, which is to innovate and create jobs.

Small businesses want government to be effective. Political gridlock only leads to uncertainty. Public/private partnerships have shown that they can work. In Michigan, I met with small business owners who shared with me how pleased they are that the automobile industry is growing again. Manufacturing jobs are coming back! For our economy to grow and add jobs, we will need to build things domestically and access international markets. Entrepreneurs and small business are ready to go.

Many business owners, however, need access to capital to expand their operations and to add additional staff. This sentiment was expressed in a meeting I had at Automation Alley, Michigan's largest technology association. The lack of accessible capital for startups and small businesses remains a challenge. We know that it takes money to make money. Advocacy's annual small business lending study lists by state the banks that are lending to small businesses. This information has been invaluable to those who may not know where to turn after a financial institution has turned them down. An update of our lending study is due this summer.

In Cleveland, my visit to the Council of Smaller Enterprises (COSE) and a local incubator that focused on innovative manufacturing added to an informative trip. The Manufacturing Advocacy and Growth Network (MAGNET), funded by the Department of Commerce's National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) provides business consulting and engineering services for advanced manufacturing companies. As an engineer myself, I was pleased to see the array of startup companies using resins, polymers, and ferrous and nonferrous materials to make products that reduce energy use and make manufacturing processes leaner. The MAGNET incubator, located adjacent to Cleveland State University, is helping to make Ohio's manufacturing sector more globally competitive.

There are a number of positive developments taking place in Michigan and Ohio. Small businesses are again looking to drive the local economy. The public/private relationship is crucial for small businesses to innovate and grow. The small business sector, our engine of economic growth, will need to have a workforce that is globally competitive. Making sure that we train U.S. workers for these jobs—as well as making sure the United States remains a beacon for the best and the brightest from around the world—should be priorities in this public/private partnership. Advocacy is encouraged that the U.S. Citizen and Immigration Services is looking at ways to streamline visa processes for individuals, students, and entrepreneurs in technical fields.

Advocacy continues to bring the small business viewpoint to discussions of these issues at the highest levels of government. Significant strides at reducing barriers—supporting entrepreneurs and small businesses—continue. It is good to know that small business is being heard.

CDFI Fund Seeks Additional Public Comment on Reporting Requirements for the Capital Magnet Fund

The U.S. Department of the Treasury, as part of its continuing effort to reduce paperwork and respondent burden, invites the general public and other Federal agencies to take this opportunity to comment on proposed and/or continuing information collections, as required by the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995, Pub. L. No. 104-13 (44 U.S.C. 3506(c)(2)(A)). Currently, the Community Development Financial Institutions Fund (CDFI Fund), an office within the Department of the Treasury, is soliciting comments concerning the reporting and record retention requirements for the Capital Magnet Fund. The request for comment was published in the Federal Register on June 8, 2012.

This request for comment on reporting and record retention for the Capital Magnet Fund builds from the first request dated September 17, 2010. The CDFI Fund is reissuing the reporting and record retention request to fulfill changed administrative needs. The revised Capital Magnet Fund Awardee Data Collection Memo has been updated based on comments provided from the September 17, 2010 request as well as program policy decisions that have been made since the implementation of the Capital Magnet Fund program.

The Capital Magnet Fund will use an annual report to collect data points from Capital Magnet Fund Awardees. This

The Obama Administration today announced a $26 million multi-agency Advanced Manufacturing Jobs and Innovation Accelerator Challenge to foster innovation-fueled job creation through public-private partnerships. These coordinated investments will help catalyze and leverage private capital, build an entrepreneurial ecosystem, and promote cluster-based development in regions across the United States. This is the third round of the Jobs Accelerator competition, which is being funded by the U.S. Department of Commerce's Economic Development Administration (EDA) and National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST); the U.S. Department of Energy; the U.S. Department of Labor's Employment and Training Administration; the Small Business Administration; and the National Science Foundation (NSF).

"This $26 million Accelerator Challenge is yet another example of the Obama Administration's commitment to supporting American manufacturers in building things here and selling them everywhere," said U.S. Commerce Secretary John Bryson. "We are so pleased to join with our federal agency partners to further strengthen the American manufacturing sector, which creates high quality, good paying jobs. Commerce's Economic Development Administration has a strong record of investing in regional innovation clusters that foster the job creation and business development crucial to an economy that is built to last. This Challenge further bolsters our efforts and builds on the momentum we have seen in the manufacturing sector in recent months, including the 489,000 U.S. manufacturing jobs that have been added since January 2010."

Advanced manufacturing is critical to the health of the national economy and provides essential goods and equipment directly to consumers as well as to a wide range of industries, including the energy production, agriculture, medical and computing industries, and the security and intelligence sectors.

"The Accelerator Challenge is one way the federal government is helping to support the manufacturing industry, a vital source of middle-class jobs," said Secretary of Labor Hilda L. Solis. "The innovative products developed as a result of this federal grant program will help our economy maintain its global competitive advantage, while also creating jobs at home."

Manufacturing accounts for 70 percent of private-sector R&D and 60 percent of U.S. exports—including a record $1.2 trillion in goods exported in 2011. Over the past 25 months, manufacturers have created nearly half a million jobs—the best streak since 1995. The Jobs Accelerator Challenge is designed to assist the development and implementation of regionally-driven economic development strategies that will support advanced manufacturing and cluster development. The goal is to create jobs, grow the economy, and enhance the competitiveness of U.S. manufacturers in the global marketplace.

"'Made in America' is making a comeback," said SBA Administrator Karen Mills. "The Advanced Manufacturing Jobs Accelerator is an opportunity to build on the momentum we're seeing in U.S. manufacturing and to support small businesses and local economies through regional innovation clusters. By working with other federal agencies, we can link, leverage, and align our resources to give small businesses the tools they need to work together, grow and create jobs in the manufacturing sector."

Approximately 12 projects are expected to be chosen through a competitive inter-agency grant process. Applicants are encouraged to submit proposals that will help grow a region's industry clusters by strengthening connections to regional economic development opportunities and advanced manufacturing assets; enhance a region's capacity to create high-quality sustainable jobs; develop a skilled and diverse advanced manufacturing workforce; increase exports; encourage the development of small businesses; and accelerate technological innovation.

"Through this partnership, the National Science Foundation will connect innovations from NSF-supported advanced manufacturing research with stakeholders who can accelerate technology commercialization and economic growth," said Thomas Peterson, NSF Assistant Director for Engineering. "NSF is making available up to $1 million for existing NSF Small Business Innovation Research (SBIR) and Small Business Technology Transfer (STTR) Phase II grantees that are part of winning projects."

The deadline for applications is July 9, 2012, and guidelines for submissions are accessible here. In addition to the six funding partners, the initiative is supported by eight other Federal agencies: U.S. Departments of Agriculture, Education, Housing and Urban Development; Environmental Protection Agency;

Denali Commission; and the U.S. Department of Commerce's International Trade Administration (ITA), Minority Business Development Administration (MBDA), and U.S. Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO).

"As President Obama made clear, an American economy built to last will depend on American manufacturing, American energy and skills for American workers," said U.S. Energy Secretary Steven Chu. "This is why the Energy Department invests in innovative, public-private initiatives like the Advanced Manufacturing Jobs and Innovation Accelerator Challenge that support American leadership and competitiveness in manufacturing."

As part of President Obama's commitment to putting more people back to work and creating an economy built to last, the Administration has invested over $200 million promoting regional innovation clusters. The Administration also created an interagency task force, known as the Taskforce for the Advancement of Regional Innovation Clusters (TARIC), to develop and administer inter-agency grant competitions. More than a dozen federal agencies have participated in TARIC-led grant competitions by providing grant funding or other forms of support to the winners of the Jobs and Innovation Accelerator Challenges.

How Payday Loans Work for People With Bad Credit

If you have bad credit, you know firsthand just how tough it is to get a loan. This might not affect your everyday life, but sometimes life takes unexpected turns and you'll be faced with a situation where you need cash now. Maybe your car broke down and you need it to get to work. Or your child broke his foot and needed medical care. Now, you're stuck trying to make the rent. Whatever the reasons are, the bottom line is you need cash and you can't let your bad credit get in the way.

Fortunately, there's still an option open to you: A payday loan. Even with bad credit, you can get a payday loan. Here's how it works.

The Only Real Requirement for Payday Loans

Many payday loans today not only don't require high credit, but won't even check your credit rating at all.

Instead, what they're looking at is your employment stability, history and pay. They want to know that you have the capability to repay. A credit history shows your tendency to repay in the past, but your current employment demonstrates whether you have the money necessary coming in to repay the loan.

With a payday loan, that's all the lender cares about. So even with poor credit, you can still get the money you need.

What the Process Looks Like

There are many different ways to get a payday loan. You can walk into a physical dealer in your neighborhood. You can do an application by phone or by fax. Or you can handle the whole thing over the internet.

Generally speaking, the amount you'll be able to take out depends entirely upon your income. If you're asking for a $1,500 payday loan but your monthly income is $800, chances are they won't give you the full amount. On the other hand, if your monthly income is $2,000 and you're only asking for $700, there's a very good chance you'll get all you asked for.

What Kind of Documentation Do You Need?

It depends entirely on the lender. Some lenders will require you to fax in your pay stubs, proof of employment and other such documentation. Other lenders won't require any documentation at all. Some lenders will want to call you and talk to you on the phone to confirm the facts, while others won't do this either.

The whole process from beginning your loan application to receiving your money can happen in as little as 24 hours. Lenders understand that most people who're using payday loans need to get access to money quickly, so they've created their systems around maximizing their speed.

Receiving and Paying the Money

Receiving your money is very simple. To expedite the process, most lenders today do wire transfers. That means instead of having to wait for a check to arrive in the mail and for the check to clear, you'll have the money show up directly in your bank account. Again, the money can literally be in your bank account within 24 hours of you beginning your application process.

How you pay back the lender depends on the lender. Some lenders prefer a physical check payment, while others prefer having the money wired back. Make sure you understand the repayment terms and methods before getting your loan.

How Does it Affect Your Credit?

By and large, getting a payday loan doesn't affect your credit. Most payday lenders don't report to the credit bureaus. That means nobody will ever know you took out a payday loan. It won't improve your credit and it won't damage your credit either.

On the other hand, if you don't repay the loan, it will damage your credit. If you don't repay the loan, the payday lender will report the loan to at least one credit agency. If you want to improve your credit, you definitely want to make sure you repay your loan on time.

Getting a payday loan with bad credit isn't difficult. All you really need is a steady job. Payday lenders understand that often time's people won't have the credit to get traditional loans. That's why payday loans are the perfect solution for cash crunches, especially if you can't get money through more traditional means. Getting money through payday loans is fast, easy and painless.

What to do when your credit card company increases your APR?

When your credit card company increases the APR on your credit card without you changing your habits, or missing a payment – this is known as rate jacking. Even though this practice has become much more prevalent, there is something you can do about it.

Step 1 – Change your credit card provider!

This might seem overly simple, but the ditch and switch option is often the very best for anybody carrying a balance on their cards. There are a plethora of balance transfer deals available at 0% APR, with nominal or no fees for the transfer itself.

The issue here is your credit scoring and history; these deals are often only available to those with the strongest credit histories.

Step 2 – Did you miss a payment and lose the promotional rate?

If you missed a payment whilst on a 0% deal, often the credit card companies will move you immediately to their standard rate, which is not likely to be competitive.

Call your provider and explain to them that this is a one off, and you want to remain one of their customers and politely request that the promotional rate is extended.

If you have no luck, move to step 3

Step 3 – Force your credit card provider to stop the increase

The first thing to do is to call your provider and ask them if they are willing to offer the debt at the existing rate when no additional debt is added. They should say yes – if they refuse run through the following checklist:

- Was your increase within the first 12 months of owning the card?
- Has there been a rise within the last 6 months

- Was the increase in APR explained to you?
- Are you in financial hardship?
- Have you been given 30 days notice?
- Have you been given the option of repaying the debt in full at the existing rate within a reasonable time period?

If the answer is no to any of these questions, write to your provider, indicating your belief that they have acted improperly under the codes of practice set down by the UK Cards Association and you would like your case to be reviewed.

Step 4 – Go to the Ombudsman

If the card company does not agree to review your case, and you still believe you have been treated unfairly, you should contact the Ombudsman.

Whenever the Ombudsman is involved the likelihood is that the company will settle directly, as it doesn't want to risk setting a precedent for future cases on the basis of the points raised in your complaint. The less information about a particular complaint that is made public the happier the companies will be.

Step 5 – Seek Help

If you are struggling to repay your debts you should seek debt counselling immediately. Look out for the not-for-profit agencies as these are more likely to act on your behalf with no hidden motives or agendas.

Good luck.
