

The 5 best states for construction right now

1. California

California has the largest population of any U.S. state and is the third-largest by area, so it makes sense that it would have the highest construction volume. There are a total of 1,302 construction projects currently under construction in California, totaling $524.6 billion collectively. It's also home to the most megaprojects in the U.S. with its top 10 consisting of six transport, two energy, and two utility projects. One of those is the $2.1 billion Mid-Coast Trolley project in San Diego, which is one of the five transit projects to watch in 2019. The total also includes the $79 billion California High-Speed Rail Line — the largest construction project in the U.S. — that was suspended earlier this year by California Gov. Gavin Newsom because of cost overruns and schedule delays.

2. Texas

After California, Texas is #2 in population and total construction volume at $425 billion. Texas has the most energy and utility projects in the U.S. at $153 billion. The state's other largest sectors are mixed-use developments ($68 billion) and infrastructure ($67 billion). ExxonMobil and Qatar Petroleum are currently working on a $10 billion project to add liquefaction and export capabilities to Golden Pass, an existing liquefied natural gas (LNG) import terminal near Sabine Pass, Texas. This is part of ExxonMobil's five-year plan to invest $50 billion in the expansion of its U.S. operations.

3. New York

New York City is the most populated city in the U.S. at over 8.5 billion people. To support that growing number, a number of major construction projects are underway across the state. According to the GlobalData report, there are 894 projects in New York totaling $409 billion. Of those 894 projects, 63% are in the pre-execution and execution stages. One project that's transforming New York is the $20 billion Hudson Yards megaproject. It has become the largest private real estate development in U.S. history and the largest development in New York City since Rockefeller Center.

4. Florida

Florida is the third most populated state in the U.S. and the fastest-growing state for mixed-use construction properties. Over the past five years, Florida has seen construction growth of 9.9%. According to the report, the growth has been driven by corporate tax cuts and efforts from the state and local governments to raise revenues for public works. There's still more construction growth on the horizon. Negotiations are taking place with David Beckham to transform the former site of Melreese Country Club into a complex for Club Internacional de Futbol Miami.

8 Ways to Find Your First Customers

By Rieva Lesonsky,

Here are some smart strategies you can use to identify and attract those critical first customers.

No matter what industry you're in, every startup business owner has the same burning question: "How will I get my first customers?" Here are some smart strategies you can use to identify and attract those critical first customers.

1. Make a list. As you've done the groundwork to launch your business, you've undoubtedly met some people who could be potential customers. For instance, these could include people you surveyed in a focus group or connected with on social media. Put them on a list of prospects. B2B startups can put businesses they've interacted with on the list. You can also do some homework online to find companies that are likely buyers for what you sell and add them to your list.
2. Look for referrals. Ask everyone you know if they know someone who might buy what you're selling. You never know where a great referral will come from, so alert your social media connections, neighbors, former co-workers, even your distant cousins that you're looking for customers. Enlist your spouse, friends and other connections to help brainstorm ideas for first customers, too.
3. Work your network. Find out what local business networking groups exist for your industry and attend some of their meetings. Focus on sharing how you can help others, not so much on how they can help you. Connecting with other business owners is a great way to sniff out prospects, whether you sell B2B or B2C.
4. Show it off. Exhibit at trade shows that attract your target customer. For instance, if you're starting a wedding planning business, a bridal trade show would be an ideal place to rent a booth. Just make sure you're ready to deliver when a customer places an order or makes a purchase.
5. Attend industry events. If you're selling B2B, you don't necessarily have to pay for a booth to benefit from a trade show or industry conference. You can just go to meet people (be prepared with key marketing materials such as business cards or sales sheets, of course). Don't try to pitch people with a hard sell; instead, focus on building connections with people who could be helpful in your new business. Then contact them when you're back in the office and start building a relationship.
6. Team up with other business owners. Find another entrepreneur whose products or services are complementary, rather than competitive, with yours and ask about connecting you with prospective clients. If you're starting a pool cleaning business, for example, see if local lawn-care companies know of any clients whose pools are looking shabby, and ask for a referral.
7. Build an online presence. Get your website up and running (even if it's just a simple site) and use search engine optimization (SEO) to get found when people search online for what you sell. Your first customer could very well come from a search engine.
8. Spread the word on social. Starting up your social media accounts before your business officially launches is a great way to generate excitement about your grand opening, products or services. Use social media advertising to target people who meet your target market criteria and get them to follow you for updates. Encourage them to spread the word to their friends, and so on, and so on.

Once you've got that first customer, treat them like gold. Make sure they're satisfied and work to keep their business. As you build a history with your first customers, turn them into brand advocates to help attract more customers and gather customer testimonials you can use to promote your business.

Why Choose LED's for Your Commercial Needs?

By Lydia Quinn,

You may have heard of LED's, but do you know what they can do for your business? If you will be needing new signage or business lighting of any type anytime soon, then you'll want to take note of what I'm about to tell you, it will save you time and money.

LED's are extremely energy efficient - 25 feet of an LED light bar can draw the same amount of energy as a single 60 watt light bulb. This is simply incredible and shows how LED's are the energy efficient lighting wave of the future.

LED's easily trump every other method of programmable signage in every way imaginable. Most notable among these is the expected lifespan of an LED or light emitting diode.

A single LED bulb or strip can often last 10 years or even more before there is any indication of light degradation. Compare this with typical and traditional incandescent bulbs, and you can understand why LED's are a much better choice. Due to the long lasting resilience of the LED, these products are virtually zero maintenance in many cases. Less maintenance is yet another way that LED's save you money.

Another advantage to using LED's is the dramatically lower power needs they require. When compared to traditional incandescent bulbs, you will see that LED's use about 1/25th the amount of power. This is superb and will significantly reduce your power bills.

For example: Lets say an incandescent sign that is left on continuously for a month will cost you $75 to run. A duplicate sign made with LED's (that has been ran for the exact same amount of time) would cost you a mere $3.14 to run! This is an incredible savings to your budget.

LED's also possess a superior view-ability, which is always an important factor in the visual marketing of signs. The penetrating light emitted by LED's is extremely deliberate and can be seen and read from hundreds of feet and even miles away.

It's no surprise that, with their long lasting durability and ability, minimal power usage, and excellent viewing range, LED's are a powerful and obvious choice for moving message displays and many other signage needs. Not surprisingly, they're great for industrial applications too.

LED products are amongst the most cost effective on the market. See for yourself what an LED moving message display can do for your business or organization!

The 5 best states for construction right now

5. Washington

California's Silicon Valley (and now San Francisco) are usually associated with the technology boom, but Washington holds its own in the tech space — and has the construction projects to prove it. The uptick in construction in this state can be attributed to large office expansion and apartment projects from technology giants Amazon, Microsoft, and Google. According to GlobalData, of the projects tracked, 89 are residential, 72 are commercial, and 83 are mixed-use developments. This includes the Alaska Way Viaduct Replacement, a $3.2 billion megaproject to build a 1.7-mile tunnel in Seattle.
