

Persistence and creativity help turn your business vision into success

[Article was originally posted on www.sba.gov]

By Chris Pilkerton,

Last month, the SBA and our network of Resource Partners held a number of workshops, trainings and counseling sessions for Entrepreneurship Month, Veterans Small Business Week and Small Business Saturday. All of these occasions helped to showcase the SBA's resources and services dedicated to supporting entrepreneurs year-round. And recently, the hard work, ingenuity and talent of America's entrepreneurs, especially those who are veterans, were fully on display during my recent visit to the Dallas, Texas area.

In Texas, I had the opportunity to meet with Taiga Coolers' company founders and veterans John Hohenshelt and Adam Artho. Hohenshelt and Artho have built their small business around producing custom-built products right in the Lone Star State. Together, the owners saw a niche in the market for fully customizable coolers made with their clients' logos and personalized design requirements. However, like most entrepreneurs, they first had to jump over several hurdles to turn their vision into success.

These entrepreneurs quickly learned that storing all the variations of custom inventory for their business was not cost-effective for them or major retailers. They realized that what they needed was a way for a customer to directly give them their specifications for an order by using an on-demand kiosk. Their problem was that the cost of developing a custom kiosk with a contractor would be roughly $60,000. That's when the skills they learned from their military training – including persistence and creativity – kicked in, and as Chef Robert Irvine recently wrote about, they worked backward from the goal to take Taiga Coolers to the next level.

After securing funding through an SBA backed loan and the use of their skills and knowledge, the veteran-owned business was not only able to fabricate the metal to build their needed kiosk, but one of their founders also taught himself how to code so the business could create the operating system for it. These efforts took a lot of skill and time but proved to be a worthwhile endeavor. Today you can now walk into retailers and design the product you want to buy through their kiosks, which can be shipped directly to you within a week.

Stories like Taiga Coolers illustrate why America's veterans are 45% more likely to be self-employed and they show us why our nation's entrepreneurs are the best in the world. There are countless stories like Taiga Coolers across the country, and they remind us that our small businesses are still the drivers of innovation in our economy. More and more, American entrepreneurs are utilizing technology to compete in their industry sectors and the SBA is there to support those efforts to help start, grow, or expand their small businesses throughout America.

Taiga Coolers is now looking to expand the number of countries that sell their products internationally and continue to develop their products for their loyal customers. As we enter a new decade of small business opportunities, it's important to remind ourselves of the unique and unmatched qualities our nation's entrepreneurs bring to the table. At the SBA, we remain focused on helping our nation's small businesses start, grow and expand their operations domestically as well as through exporting opportunities. Under President Trump, small business optimism has consistently sustained high levels, and it's our goal at the SBA to continue helping entrepreneurs thrive in today's and tomorrow's economy.

Mayor Garcetti announces Griffith Parkline Shuttle

[Article was originally posted on www.lamayor.org]

Mayor Garcetti today announced the new Parkline Shuttle, a free service at Griffith Park that provides car-free access to over a dozen destinations — alleviating demand for parking and easing congestion in the area.

“If we want to get more people out of their cars, we need to provide convenient, sustainable alternatives that take riders where they need to go,” said Mayor Garcetti. “Griffith Park is one of our City’s most iconic destinations, and this new shuttle will encourage visitors to enjoy it without a vehicle — protecting its natural environment and making it easier to access the park’s incredible attractions.”

The Parkline Shuttle will open to the public on Saturday, December 7, and run on Saturdays and Sundays from noon to 10 p.m., with buses running 15 to 20 minutes apart. The shuttles will be ADA accessible, include bike racks and seating for 25 passengers, and connect visitors to existing public transit offerings in and around the park.

The shuttle will be operated by the Los Angeles Department of Transportation (LADOT) and stop at the Griffith Observatory; Greek Theatre; Franklin’s Café (with access to the playground and Roosevelt Golf Course); Hollywood Sign Hike; Los Feliz and Riverside intersection; Ranger Station (with access to the visitor center and merry-go-round); Park Center (with access to the Old Zoo and Shane’s Inspiration playground); L.A. Zoo; Autry Museum; Pecan Grove; Los Angeles Steamers; Travel Town Museum; and Pony and Train Rides.

“By uniting the icons of Griffith Park as well as its Metro and DASH stops, the Griffith Parkline is ushering in a new era for the nation’s greatest urban park,” Councilmember David Ryu said. “For the first time in its 123-year history, visitors can access all that Griffith Park has to offer without once needing a car. The Griffith Parkline is free, accessible, and efficient — and just one way we are reducing traffic and increasing access in Griffith Park.”

Griffith Park has experienced steady growth in visitation from locals and tourists in recent years, increasing vehicle congestion and parking demand. The Parkline Shuttle is the City’s latest effort to address these issues and encourage car-free public access while ensuring more visitors can enjoy the park and its amenities.

Other improvements include a DASH service to connect visitors to the Metro Red Line, which moved more than half-a-million passengers last year; a reconfigured, more efficient traffic pattern; and enhanced wayfinding and signage throughout the Park.

“Creating a network of opportunities while improving connectivity throughout the park will give many the option of enjoying all Griffith Park has to offer,” said Mike Shull, General Manager of the Department of Recreation and Parks. “The Parkline Shuttle fulfills Recreation and Parks goal and commitment to the community. It is the most convenient, accessible and environmentally friendly way to get around Griffith Park.”

“At LADOT, we pride ourselves on connecting Angelenos with experiences,” said LADOT General Manager Seleta Reynolds. “The new, free Parkline service will give residents and visitors alike the chance to explore each of Griffith Park’s iconic locations while cutting traffic and improving the experience for everyone.”
