

Mayor Garcetti announces $10 million investment in jobs program for formerly incarcerated Angelenos

Mayor Eric Garcetti announced today that Los Angeles has received a three-year, $10 million grant from the California Department of Transportation to extend New Roads to Second Chances — a program that gives formerly incarcerated Angelenos training, support, and jobs maintaining and cleaning our roads.

“Los Angeles is a place where everybody belongs — and we’ll keep working to create opportunities for anyone ready to give back to our communities,” said Mayor Garcetti. “No one needs a second chance more urgently than our formerly incarcerated sisters and brothers, and New Roads to Second Chances gives people a chance to rebuild their lives through the dignity of work.”

New Roads launched in 2016 through a partnership between the Mayor’s Office, Caltrans, and Chrysalis, with an initial $8.9 million state grant. To date, New Roads has served more than 1,200 individuals on probation or parole with job training, workforce development, wraparound services, and transitional employment — with the goal of supporting their successful reentry following incarceration.

Each New Roads participant is eligible for up to 90 paid working days on a Caltrans crew. Since the program’s inception, New Roads teams have collected 606,811 bags of trash from roads and highways across L.A. County, helping clean and beautify our public passages.

“We know that African Americans and other people of color are disproportionately represented in our criminal justice system,” said City Council member Marqueece Harris-Dawson. “It’s important that these people have the support services and opportunities to thrive following incarceration. New Roads provides thousands of opportunities to men and women looking to establish themselves in the city and rejoin their communities.”

Beyond joining cleanup crews, participants work with case managers at Chrysalis to help them develop their resumes, participate in job-readiness classes, complete practice interviews, and access everything from computers and professional attire to scholarship funds and transportation assistance. While working for New Roads, participants develop skills that enable them to transition to full-time employment and long-term self-sufficiency.

“For individuals trying to navigate challenges to securing employment, such as experience with the criminal justice system, a transitional job presents the opportunity to get back to work quickly, earn a wage, and develop or build on their skills,” said Mark Loranger, President & CEO of Chrysalis. “The job outcomes for this program are impressive. But one of the most amazing things that I’ve seen happen over the first several years of this program is how crew members work and grow together. The experience of working on a team and with supervisors who are invested in their success is clearly a part of why this program has had such great outcomes.”

Mayor Garcetti founded the first dedicated Office of Reentry in the city’s history, focused on supporting formerly incarcerated people in reintegrating into the community, accessing employment opportunities, and creating a safety net that lowers the recidivism rate and deters formerly incarcerated Angelenos from falling into homelessness. In addition to New Roads, the Mayor also launched Project impACT, a Proposition 47-funded program that provides counseling and wraparound services to formerly incarcerated Angelenos.

About Chrysalis

Chrysalis is a nonprofit organization dedicated to creating a pathway to self-sufficiency for people experiencing homelessness and low-income individuals by providing the resources and support needed to prepare for, find, and retain employment. Since 1984, Chrysalis has served more than 66,000 individuals at its five centers and locations throughout Southern California. In 2019, more than 2,500 Chrysalis clients secured employment while participating in Chrysalis’ program and more than 1,460 participants worked a transitional job with the organization’s social enterprise. SBA Administrator Carranza: USMCA to Benefit America's 30 million Small Businesses; Enabling Continued Growth & Upward Mobility

The U.S. Small Business Administration Administrator Jovita Carranza issued the following statement in response to President Donald J. Trump's signing of the innovative United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement (USMCA):

"Today's signing into law of the USMCA by President Trump is a landmark achievement that promises to create lucrative new opportunities for small businesses, including many minority-owned businesses. Thirty-six percent of Latino-owned businesses earn most of their revenue online, compared to 18% of other small businesses, and this new framework will make it easier to sell products to consumers in Canada and Mexico by eliminating complex and cost-prohibitive rules requiring small businesses to open foreign offices.

"As a result of this President's leadership on trade, $68 billion in new economic activity will be generated, and an estimated 176,000 new jobs will be created, helping to further fuel upward mobility in communities that need it most."

6 Simple Steps for Getting Things Done at Your Small Business

Whether you're running a for-profit or nonprofit business, an ability to organize efforts and initiatives is a necessary skill to achieve success. Effectively executing efforts and accomplishing goals requires planning and coordination among team members (which may be a combination of employees, vendors, suppliers, contractors, etc.).

While some small business owners seem to have a natural knack for project management, it's not everyone's strength. Don't feel it's defeated if it isn't yours and you don't have the resources to hire a professional project manager.

With a process in place to guide you, you—or a designated person from your team—will become more adept at moving projects from start to finish.

The following tips will help you create a roadmap that you can follow whenever embarking on any new project.

Your 6-Step Guide to Successful Project Management

Define your goal and get buy-in from all project team members.

As you do this, you will want to determine each team member's role and responsibilities. In this step, also consider how the project will affect your company and how you'll measure the project's impact.

1. Determine the project deliverables.

What key tasks do team members need to accomplish to move the project along the path to completion? You'll also need to identify which deliverables depend on other deliverables, so you can establish a timeline that puts tasks in a logical order.

2. List the resources you will need.

Assess what you will need regarding budget, person-hours and tools to complete the project.

3. Set a timeline and identify milestones to mark your progress.

After knowing what needs to be done and by whom, create target completion dates for your project deliverables. In your timeline, identify interim goals ("milestones") that can serve as major landmarks along the way. As the project progresses, your ability to reach milestones will help you know if you'll need to adjust your scope, budget or expectations. Milestones also help boost morale as they help project team members see the progress they've made.

4. Define the collaborative process.

Determine how often your team members will meet as a group to report their progress and share any challenges that might prevent them from fulfilling their deadlines. Schedule your meetings well in advance, so everyone on your team can reserve the dates and times on their calendars.

5. Select a tool to help you stay organized and keep all project documentation in a single place accessible to all team members.

A variety of online tools exist that can help you manage projects. Some are more intuitive than others, so assess your team members' comfort level with the technology involved before choosing what you will use. A few examples that might be a good fit for your business include Trello, Evernote, Asana, Dropbox and Google Drive.

Although you might try to save time by skipping some of the initial steps in the process, you should resist that temptation. Successful project management begins with thorough planning. Shortcuts in the beginning could lead to misunderstandings among team members—and missed deadlines.

If you need suggestions on how to manage your projects more efficiently, consider reaching out to SCORE. SCORE mentors have expertise in all aspects of starting and growing a small business, and they can provide you with free guidance as you hone your project management skills.

Since 1964, SCORE "Mentors to America's Small Business" has helped more than 10 million aspiring entrepreneurs and small business owners through mentoring and business workshops. More than 11,000 volunteer business mentors in over 320 chapters serve their communities through entrepreneur education dedicated to the formation, growth and success of small businesses.
