

Thermal Imaging Feature Streams on the Fly

New Thermal Live Map tool gives drone operators a real-time view of thermal data.

By Tom Sawyer,

A software and drone-data platform developer has released what it claims is the first mobile mapping feature to deliver thermal maps of target areas as the data is being collected, for real-time evaluation in the field.

DroneDeploy announced the availability of the Thermal Live Map on June 12. The feature joins a similar, visible-spectrum live-viewing capability released in February.

The live-map tools let operators view the data on the drone controller screen as it is collected and while it is stitched into a view of the entire site being photographed. In the case of the thermal view, the display is color-coded to reveal temperature variations. The information can be used to support quick decisions on site while flight operations are underway. The data also can be uploaded to the DroneDeploy platform for later sharing and viewing.

Ryan Moret, the southern regional field solutions manager for McCarthy Building Cos., says he had been asking the vendor for such a tool for almost a year, and started field testing and helping to tune it up for a product release this spring. “We’re excited about what it can do for us,” he says. “This could be so much easier. It definitely will speed getting from a photo to something that is meaningful and putting it into the team’s hand.”

Moret explained that seeing anomalies immediately in the context of their surroundings adds a lot of value. “We use thermography pretty widely now. We do it for building enclosures and search for leaks, water damage and things of that nature on existing buildings.” He says seeing an image of the full site as it is collected, rather than just ending up with a photo of the anomaly, will make the data more meaningful and improve the way insights are communicated. Moret adds, though, that he thinks the real-time view will be especially useful for inspecting solar farm panel arrays.

Moret says current practice is to fly low and slow with a thermal camera taking high-resolution still images for postprocessing and match-up to the map of the facility. Problem panels are hotter than ones performing properly. “You have countless solar panels. You fly the thermal camera over and maybe you break it down into a grid. Every time you find an abnormality you mark it on a plan to give context of where the photo was taken, and do it all day long sitting in the desert working on snapshots, using whatever mark-up tool we have.”

“With the live app that DroneDeploy has put out, we can fly faster because we are not stopping to take photos, and we can give that to the foreman or superintendent sitting right there to address live.”

6 Tips for the First-Time Business Owner

Focus. Focus. Focus.

Many first-time entrepreneurs feel the need to jump at every "opportunity" they come across. Opportunities are often wolves in sheep's clothing. Avoid getting side-tracked. Juggling multiple ventures will spread you thin and limit both your effectiveness and productivity. Do one thing perfectly, not 10 things poorly. If you feel the need to jump onto another project, that might mean something about your original concept.

Know what you do. Do what you know.

Don't start a business simply because it seems sexy or boasts large hypothetical profit margins and returns. Do what you love. Businesses built around your strengths and talents will have a greater chance of success. It's not only important to create a profitable business, it's also important that you're happy managing and growing it day in and day out. If your heart isn't in it, you will not be successful.

Know what you know, what you don't know and who knows what you don't

No one knows everything, so don't come off as a know-it-all. Surround yourself with advisors and mentors who will nurture you to become a better leader and businessman. Find successful, knowledgeable individuals with whom you share common interests and mutual business goals that see value in working with you for the long-term.

Say it in 30 seconds or don't say it at all

From a chance encounter with an investor to a curious customer, always be ready to pitch your business. State your mission, service and goals in a clear and concise manner. Fit the pitch to the person. Less is always more.

Act like a startup

Forget about fancy offices, fast cars and fat expense accounts. Your wallet is your company's life-blood. Practice and perfect the art of being frugal. Watch every dollar and triple-check every expense. Maintain a low overhead and manage your cash flow effectively.

Don't fall victim to your own B.S.

Don't talk the talk unless you can walk the walk. Impress with action not conversation. Endorse your business enthusiastically, yet tastefully. Avoid exaggerating truths and touting far reaching goals as certainties. In short, put up or shut up.

CALTRANS 2016 DISPARITY STUDY PUBLIC COMMENT FORUMS

The California Department of Transportation (Caltrans) conducted a Disparity Study (Study) that Caltrans and local governments will use to refine their implementations of the Federal Disadvantaged Business Enterprise (DBE) program in accordance with 49 Code of Federal Regulations Part 26. The Study includes an analysis of whether there is evidence of discrimination or its effects in the transportation contracting industry in California.

Caltrans is hosting a series of Public Comment Forums to obtain comments related to the Study and personal testimony and experiences related to working in the California transportation contracting industry. Information Caltrans is seeking includes, but is not limited to, whether:

- Firms face difficulties or barriers when bidding as prime contractors, subcontractors, or suppliers
- Business owners believe they have been treated fairly or unfairly based on their race, ethnicity, or gender
- Contractors solicit, or fail to solicit, bids or price quotes from DBEs on projects with no DBE goals
- There is a level playing field for firms in accessing to capital, bonding, and insurance

You are invited to participate in public forums that will be held statewide as follows:
