

What You Need To Know About Training and Apprenticeship Programs

The right hire makes all the difference on construction and infrastructure projects. Nobody wants errors that cost time and money, or worse, injuries on the job site. That's why a hiring a prepared workforce is one of the most important decisions a contractor can make.

Today's skilled workers have received a combination of classroom learning and hands-on experience to make certain they have what's needed to succeed. Workers who have experience with a range of topics from construction fundamentals to blue print reading to concrete techniques to green construction to landscaping are an invaluable asset for contractors.

The best hires are also versed in safety. These people understand OSHA 10 and 30 fire safety and extinguishing techniques, they've received emergency response training and know about forklift safety, hazardous waste safety, work zone safety and more.

Construction is a rapidly evolving industry with new standards and techniques being introduced all the time. Qualified workers need to be up to speed with those changes, as well as simple things like basic math and a working knowledge of computers.

"An apprenticeship program is a fantastic resource to companies like mine," said Ricardo Ayala, owner of Ayala Engineering. "The apprentices receive first-class training. The training gives them the skills for the job, but the program also provides them the dedication and discipline they need to be successful. As an owner of a small construction company, I can use all the skilled and dedicated employees I can get."

"We work closely with our signatory contractors to develop our curriculum and to respond to their changing needs," said Scott Gordon, Executive Director of The Laborers Training School & Apprenticeship Program in Southern California. "We recently worked with our signatory contractors to incorporate tilt-up work processes into our curriculum because in Southern California tilt up construction is booming due to increased online commerce and the need for online retailers to meet their distribution and warehousing needs."

Why Journeypersons Pay Off

Becoming a construction trade journeyperson is not easy. For example, it requires 4,000 training hours in order to become a LiUNA journeyperson. That means that journeymen and women are highly trained professionals who have invested extensive time and energy in their career and carry the experience necessary to get the job done right. However, the rewards of joining an apprenticeship program are great. Students are able to "earn-while-they-learn," and they get state-of-

Training and Apprenticeship Programs

the-art training, career advancement opportunities, excellent wages and benefits and safe working conditions.

There are multiple paths to joining a labor apprenticeship program. Interested individuals can contact an individual union's training program to sign-up or they can be sponsored by their current employer if that employer is a union contractor. Another avenue is to go through pre-apprenticeship programs, which are typically done in partnership with community-based organizations and serve as a pathway toward becoming an apprentice – and ultimately a journeyman. These programs provide opportunities and second chances to people that need help, such as high-risk youths, the under employed and others struggling to make a better life for themselves.

Whatever the path to getting there, apprentices and ultimately journeymen come out of the programs highly trained in their craft and ready to work safely. They have access to continual training through the union's on-going requirements for members to be current on their skills. And, they are ready to get the job done right and on time.

“The initial training emphasizes basic construction principals, hands-on experience, and safety. The continuing education platform provides opportunities for both apprentices and journeymen to improve their skills as well as their careers,” said Kate Linscott of Linscott Engineering Contractors. “Safety classes, certificate courses and the focus on work ethic make these laborers an integral part of our team and enhance the day to day operations of our company.”

“We take great pride in our training facility and the investment we put into our workforce,” said Leonard Gonzales, Executive Director, Laborers' Training & Retraining Trust Fund for Northern California. “Each year our facility invests millions of dollars in ensuring our contractors have a skilled workforce. Our apprentices have more than 4,000 hours of combined classroom and on-the-job field experience that prepares them for whatever the project demands.”

Apprenticeships and training programs help contractors ensure that the people they hire are highly-trained and ready to work safely on a job site. Hiring someone who is trained goes a long way toward ensuring a successful project.
