

Construction Employment Rises By 30,000 Jobs In October And 330,000 For The Year

Hourly Pay Jumps 3.9 Percent And Industry Unemployment Rate Falls To 3.6 Percent

Construction employment increased by 30,000 jobs in October and by 330,000 jobs over the past year, topping 7.3 million for the first time since April 2008, while the industry's average pay jumped and unemployment decreased to a historic low, according to an analysis of new government data by the Associated General Contractors of America. Despite the steep gains in employment and pay, a recent survey by the association finds contractors continue to struggle to find qualified workers.

"Job gains remain strong and well balanced between residential and nonresidential construction," said Ken Simonson, the association's chief economist. "Contractors are raising pay faster than at any time since the recession to attract workers from other industries as well as new entrants, yet many firms report they continue to have difficulty filling positions."

Construction employment totaled 7,318,000 in October, a gain of 4.7 percent over the past 12 months. Employment in residential construction—comprising residential building and specialty trade contractors—grew by 16,600 jobs for the month and 143,500 jobs over the past 12 months, a 5.3 percent increase. Employment in nonresidential construction—including building, specialty trades, and heavy and civil engineering construction—grew by 13,500 jobs in October and 187,200 jobs during the past year, a 4.4 percent increase, Simonson noted.

Hourly earnings in the industry averaged $30.21 in October, an increase of 3.9 percent from a year earlier—the steepest one-year rise since June 2009. Average hourly earnings in construction are now 10.7 percent higher than the average for all nonfarm private-sector jobs, which rose 3.1 percent in the past year, to $27.30. Meanwhile, the unemployment rate for jobseekers with construction experience in October was 3.6 percent, down from 4.5 percent in October 2017. The number of such workers fell to 352,000 from 418,000 a year earlier. Both figures were the lowest for October since the series began in 2000, the economist pointed out.

In the recent AGC-Autodesk Workforce survey, 76 percent of respondents said their firms plan to increase their headcount of hourly craft workers in the next year. However, 80 percent of the firms said they are having trouble filling hourly positions. For all but one of 20 specific crafts included in the survey, a majority of respondents reported that they were having more trouble hiring craft personnel this year compared to last year. Furthermore, over three-quarters of respondents replied that the local programs for supplying well-trained, skilled craft personnel were poor or only fair.

Association officials urged government leaders to adopt recommendations from the association's Workforce Development Plan, including reforms to immigration policy and increased funding and flexibility for current federal career and technical education programs. They noted that more people would choose high-paying construction careers if they were exposed to them in school and elsewhere.

"Construction workers continue to benefit from positive economic conditions that are leading firms to boost pay and expand opportunities for their workforce," Stephen E. Sandherr, the association's chief executive officer, said. "We need more public officials to understand that the path to a good, middle-class life doesn't always include attending a four-year college and spending a lifetime behind a desk."

8(a) Application - Weighting When to Apply

By Robin James,

There are two sides to the story on when to apply for the SBA 8(a) Certification. With the average 8(a) firm receiving over $6 MM in federal contracts annually, they often leap-frog over their peers that wait too long and become too successful in order to apply. Here are some of the factors one should look at in making a determination as to when to apply for 8(a).

Waiting to Apply Advantages:

1. Firm has more time to potentially be awarded a Federal Contract. Having prior federal contracting experience, which provides past performance, as well as federal buyer contacts can greatly reduce the amount of time it takes in landing your firm's first 8(a) contract.

2. Larger firm can take on bigger initial contracts than a smaller firm. The SBA must approve all sole source contracts that are awarded to an 8(a) firm, and the larger the firm, the more the SBA will be willing to approve.

3. An older firm typically has more financial capital available, therefore can spend resources on hiring dedicated federal business development staff, or consultants that can aid in quickly ramping up the firm's federal business.

Waiting to Apply Disadvantages:

1. An owner of an 8(a) firm must be classified as economically disadvantaged by the SBA in order to have their application approved. This requirement is that the owner of the firm has personally earned less than $250,000 per year, on average, over the past three years (with some exclusions) and their Net Worth must be less than $250,000 (with some exclusion). The larger a firm becomes, the more likely the owner will step over one or both of these boundaries, and no longer be considered eligible for 8(a).

2. 70% Rule – The SBA has a requirement for firms that not more than 70% of a firm's revenue can be earned from a single source, wanting to see some level of diversity in a firm's customer base, unless the single largest customer is the Federal Government. Recently, the SBA has taken the position for newer firms, typically those applying for a 2-year waiver, the SBA will waive this requirement in some cases, therefore a firm with an adverse weighting of their customer base could lose its ability to apply for 8(a) by waiting too long.

3. Complacency sets in for many firms, and waiting to apply means that it does not go to the forefront and the firm can miss out on a major business accelerator opportunity.

If you would like to review your firm's current set of circumstances to review whether or not now is a good time to apply for 8(a), feel free to give me a call and we can schedule more in-depth discussion.

Feel free to give me a call if you would like for me to review your 8a program eligibility at 703-688-3546.

SBA and VA Join Forces to Advance Entrepreneurship Opportunities for Veterans

Launch Upcoming National Veterans Small Business Week

SBA Administrator Linda McMahon and U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs Secretary Robert Wilkie today announced a new partnership dedicated to supporting Veteran small businesses.

Administrator McMahon and Secretary Wilkie signed a Memorandum of Understanding between the two agencies to collaborate and scale a new pilot program that will offer intensive management and leadership training for Veteran entrepreneurs. President Donald J. Trump recently showed his continued commitment to our nation's small businesses and to Veterans by donating his second-quarter salary to the SBA. These donated funds will help the SBA with develop and launch the pilot program.

"Veteran businesses owners are critically important to our nation's economy. In fact, one in 10 business owners is a Veteran, collectively employing nearly five million America workers," SBA Administrator McMahon said. "The VA and the SBA are proud to join forces to shape and scale this new management and executive leadership program specifically designed for Veteran small business owners. Our agencies' collaboration is so important as we work to ensure this pilot program is tailored to leverage the skillsets of our Veterans and provide them with the resources they need to take their companies to the next level."

"By signing this MOU between the VA and the SBA, we are committing two federal agencies to advance, improve, and expand opportunities for transitioning Service members and Veterans to own their own businesses," said Secretary Wilkie.

Additionally, the two leaders used the occasion to launch the upcoming National Veterans Small Business Week, Nov. 5-9. This year's theme is "Our Veteran Business Community," highlighting specific aspects of the Veteran business community, ranging from aspiring to current Veteran and military business owners, including organizations that provide entrepreneurial training.

"We dedicate this week in honor of the many accomplishments of Veteran, service member and military spouse small business owners nationwide. Across the country, SBA district offices and resource partners, as well as local organizations, will be hosting numerous events to spotlight the success of our nation's 2.5 million Veteran-owned businesses. Entrepreneurship is not a solo mission. I'm proud to be a part of a network that serves the needs of our Veteran and military business owners," Administrator McMahon concluded.
