Va. Beach Business Expo seeking to 'Close the Gap'

By Rosaland Tyler

Associate Editor

New Journal and Guide

To trade business cards and zero in on proven moneymaking strategies, register online for the free Minority Business Council's Conference and Expo, which will be held at the Virginia Beach Convention Center on Nov. 7 from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.

There are several reasons why organizers chose Floyd E. Wilson Jr. as the keynote speaker for the 15th annual event: Removing the Barriers – Closing the Gap. These days, many people in Maryland know Wilson was the first African American to win a city council seat in Prince George's County in the early 1960s. He serves on several impressive boards including Prince George's Community College, and Bowie State University. He is the executive director of the county's Minority Business Opportunities Commission. He is also involved in the MGM casino project Prince George's voters approved last Nov. bumping the number of planned casinos in the state from five to six.

But the accolades are coming decades after Wilson opened his own small business. Before Wilson recently became involved in the $925 million MGM casino project which is expected to produce millions in tax revenues, he opened three day care centers that served 300 children starting in the early 1960s. And he helped launch the area's first black-owned bank.

The first African-American to win a city council seat in the 1960s, he served six years. Meanwhile, he was also a biology and chemistry teacher from 1962-1972.

"Bottom line, the issue I plan to address is how to grow and expand a minority business," said Wilson in a recent telephone interview. A father and a husband, Wilson also found time to launch a Christian Business Institute that still meets monthly at his church, First Baptist of Glenarden in Prince George's County.

"I plan to discuss my experiences and how we did it back in Prince George's County when the environment was not always receptive to minority and women-owned businesses," Wilson said. "I plan to urge business owners to utilize their full potential. It is there. You just have to tap into it."

Once hobbled by a lack of capital, lack of access to government or private contracts, as well as other issues, minority businesses are navigating through new terrain, according to a report titled The New Agenda for Minority Business.

But the landscape changed in the 1980s. Supplier diversity programs allowed more black business owners to acquire government contracts. Revenues rose annually by 10 percent. And small black businesses have created 23 percent more jobs, a growth rate that is higher than the norm.

But the gap remains because minority businesses are still disproportionately represented in low-growth and no-growth areas, the report noted. "They tend to rely on personal debt and family financing over business loans, equity, and other tools that are commonly accepted in the capital markets. As a result, minority businesses often lack the size, scale, and capabilities of their majority counterparts."

In Virginia Beach, minority business owners will learn how to navigate through the maze. Although attendance wavered for the past five years, organizers took a look at what was driving numbers down at the free annual event.

Organizers discovered the word was not getting out. Business owners wanted more networking opportunities. New owners wanted to know how they could take proven skills and launch a business in a sluggish economy. Fixing these problems, organizers say about 200 people have already registered for this year's event. About 200 people attended last year.

"This year's event will be a culmination of key items geared toward you," said Sharon Foster, the minority business coordinator for three years at the MBC, an agency that advises the city manager and the city council on the city's procurement policies and procedures.

Va. Beach Business Expo seeking to 'Close the Gap'

The conference aims to answer questions. "How can you market your business?" Foster explained. "What can you do to empower yourself? We eliminated workshops to allow the participants more face-to-face time to promote their goods and services."

"This way they can provide detailed information about their products and services," Foster explained. "They can learn what they need to do and can do to increase profits. By taking this approach we hope it will promote our theme of removing the barriers and closing the gap. Then, comes the hard part: Getting people to know who you are."

Business owners can listen to the voice of experience to navigate. Wilson said his message is simple. See yourself as a leader in your community.

"I will encourage businesses to see they hold leadership positions," Wilson said. "As a result you need to solve a lot of different problems. Become certified, get involved in your community, and see yourself as a leader."

"And I will urge them to encourage more businesses to relocate to Virginia Beach," Wilson said. "I will urge them to constantly solve an array of problems. As you solve problems, you will create a lot of jobs."

"A lot of people in our community are unemployed," Wilson continued. "The recent federal shutdown shows no one should be dependent on the federal government. You can work for yourself in your community and enjoy what you do. I will try to encourage people to be community leaders. Help others see there are other ways to make a living, and enjoy it as well."

In September, several hundred Maryland vendors gathered to determine what role they will play in the MGM casino and resort development project that predicts revenues will hit $650 million in its third year of operation.

The casino project is expected to create an estimated 7,500 jobs with 4,000 jobs located at the new casino. The 21-story hotel and spa will feature seven restaurants, a 1,200 seat theatre, and parking for 5,000 vehicles. Visitors from as far away as Hong Kong are expected to play in the facility that will include 3,600 slots, 140 table games, and poker.

Still, the Virginia Beach event is loaded with opportunities. Foster said, "You should come if you are a small biz owner who is serious about learning more, meeting more people. It is a fabulous networking experience."

Representatives from the state Department of Minority Business Enterprise, Small, Woman and Minority (SWaM) Program and the Disadvantaged Business Enterprise (DBE) Program will also be available for consultation.

This event is free. To register go to the Virginia Beach Minority Business Council website.
