Resources for Asian American Businesses

By John Suarez

Asian American business owners can take advantage of a number of resources to help propel their small business enterprises, in both the public and private sectors.

An obvious starting point is to consider the resources available through the US government, notably the US Small Business Administration and the US Minority Business Development Agency. These two agencies were created to serve small and minority-owned firms, and Asian American businesses fall within these categories. The help that is available from these agencies runs the gamut from financing and access to capital, to business planning, networking, and mentoring.

Searching "Asian" in the search engines of these websites will relay a plethora of specific information and resources targeted to the Asian American business demographic, including services, data, business summits, and opportunities.

Outside of government, the United States Pan Asian American Chamber of Commerce (USPAACC) is the preeminent organization serving Asian American businesses. The USPAACC's mission is to serve as a gateway organization, connecting Asian American firms and related groups to corporate and government contracts, minority business suppliers, and information about Asian Americans and the Asia market.

The USPAACC, which is based in Washington, DC, represents a diverse group of Asian Americans, including those who trace their heritage to China, Hong Kong, Taiwan, Japan, the Philippines, South Korea, India, Indonesia, Vietnam, Cambodia, Thailand, Singapore, Malaysia, Bangladesh, Pakistan, and Mongolia.

One of the USPAACC's major annual events is CelebAsian, the nation's largest procurement conference for Asian American businesses to connect Fortune-level corporations and governments with Asian American and minority businesses to pursue contracting relationships. CelebAsian 2019 will be held June 5 to 7 in Houston, Texas.

A number of other organizations offer resources targeted directly to Asian American firms. These include:

Asian American Business Development Center

This organization was established in New York City in 1994 to promote greater recognition of Asian American economic contributions to the general economy. AABDC's mission is to assist
